JAPANESE RETREAT FROM FLOOD MENACE

CAPTURED TERRITORY ABANDONED

Mighty River Loose, And Millions Of Lives Endangered

Swirling red-brown waters of China's Sorrow the name by which the Yellow or Hwang Ho River has been known through centuries are threatening to overwhelm Japanese and Chinese alike on the Lunghai front, scene of last week's bitter fighting.

The Japanese have been forced to retreat from Kaifeng, the dearly-bought capital of Honan province, and the all-devouring giant now completely surrounds that city of 300,000 people.

The few remaining inhabitants of the capital have closed the gates of the city and barricaded them with sandbags, hoping that the ancient, crumbling walls will provide protection until the floods subside. The suburbs are already under four feet of water.

Between Chengchow and Kaifeng the floods are sweeping across the Lunghai Railway on a ten-mile front, carrying all before them.

Hankow, June 13.
 No-one will ever know who caused the breaches in the Yellow River dykes.

The Chinese claim that Japanese artillery was responsible. The Japanese claim that the Chinese deliberately forced farmers, at the point of the bayonet, to make the breaches in order to impede the advance of the Japanese forces on Chengchow.

Whoever is responsible has released an all-devouring giant who is threatening to consume Japanese and Chinese alike.

The sand-laden waters of China's Sorrow are now pouring through the destroyed kaoliang matresses—dykes laboriously laid down during the past ten years—in a roaring torrent. Between Chengchow and Honan's ancient walled capital city of Kaifeng, a swirling red-brown flood is irresistibly sweeping across the Lunghai Railway on a ten-mile front, carrying all before it.

Completely Surrounded
 Kaifeng is completely surrounded by water. Gates of the ancient wall around the city have been shut and barricaded with sandbags, in the hope that the wall will prevent the city from becoming completely inundated.

Suburbs outside the city walls are under four feet of water, and many people trapped in this part are perched on trees and roof-tops, vainly hoping for succour.

The Japanese, whose mechanized and modern army was able to force the might of China's forces from Honan's capital a fortnight ago, has had to retreat before this ancient

Full Honours For Victims Of R.A.F. Crash

Pretoria, June 13.
 The funeral of four Royal Air Force boxers and two South African Air Force officers took place here to-day with full military honours and was attended by 3,000 troops and many thousands of people from surrounding districts.
 The airmen were killed when a plane in which they were travelling to a sports meet crashed in the mountains.—Reuter.

ADVANCE ENTIRELY HALTED

Japanese Menace To Chengchow Removed

Hankow, June 14.
 The Japanese advance on Chengchow has been completely halted by the Yellow River floods and the Japanese have now commenced a general withdrawal towards Kweichow from the Kaifeng area.

The information was released by a Chinese spokesman at this morning's press conference.

The flood waters crossed the Lunghai Railway on Sunday morning and are now rapidly spreading eastward and southward, forcing Japanese troops and Chinese civilians alike to retreat before their menace.

The breaches at Huankou are from 120 to 150 feet wide. In this area, constant silt of the river with sand has raised the river-bed above the surrounding terrain, and the only thing hindering keeping the river in check has been the man-made mattress dykes. With these dykes broken, the entire waters of the Yellow River have found a new unimpeded path, along the old bed which, 80 years ago, took the mighty waters of China's Sorrow to the sea at Hanchow instead of in the Gulf of Chihli, 300 miles northwards.

On Saturday afternoon, Chinese and Japanese troops were fighting bitterly for possession of Pailin, a town on the southern bank of the river. Both sides were forced to abandon the region on Sunday, defeated by the new terror.—Reuter.

ST. PAUL'S IS SOUND

London, June 14.
 After an examination by experts, it is officially stated that there is no evidence of any disturbance in the structure of St. Paul's Cathedral as a result of the earth tremors of June 11.—Reuter.

Fog Aided Japanese in Surprise Anking Attack

POSTER PARADE DEMANDS BOYCOTT

London Campaign Against Japan

London, June 13.

Thousands of people in the West End had their attention called to the Far East by a monster poster parade through the streets this evening.

The parade was organised by the China Campaign Committee, and banners, bearing slogans such as "No Oil for Japan", were carried from Marble Arch to Westminster. Thousands of leaflets were distributed en route.

The Dean of Kingston headed the procession, and was followed by Mrs. Clement Attlee, wife of the leader of the Parliamentary Labour Party, Professor Wang, of the University of Shanghai, and other prominent people.—Reuter.

ANOTHER DEFENCE LOAN OUT

$209,000,000 Total Of Funds Needed Since 1936

London, June 13.
 Reuter learns that the lists for a $209,000,000 Defence Loan will open and close on Wednesday.

The Loan will be at 3 per cent, and will be issued at £98. It will be redeemable between 1954 and 1958.

This is part of the borrowing programme announced last year.

Including the £100,000,000 raised by the Defence Loan of last year, the total money borrowed for defence since 1936, with last year's budget surplus of £20,000,000, reaches the staggering sum of £200,000,000, or approximately £5 per capita of the total population of the United Kingdom.

It is estimated that this total, which includes the present projected loan, will cover defence expenditure for borrowed money for about a year.—Reuter.

NAVAL PLANE ON MERCY FLIGHT

Brings Urgent Case To Colony For Operation

Night Landing In Harbour

Catapulted from the deck of H.M.S. Dorsetshire with a seaman with acute appendicitis strapped in the rear cockpit, a Fleet Air Arm seaplane roared to and fro for 45 minutes above Hongkong last night, waiting until lighting facilities could be provided for it to land in the harbour.

Adding another chapter to the 10,000-ton cruiser's recent series of front-page adventures, Ordinary Seaman James O'Shea developed appendicitis aboard the warship as it was steaming through the China Sea on exercises.

The seaman was examined by Surgeon Cmdr. Crawford, who was a witness last week in the Dorsetshire murder case at the Central Magistrate's court, and it was decided that he should be sent immediately to the Royal Naval Hospital in Hongkong for an operation.

Brief radio messages were flashed to the Commodore in Hongkong, and the seaplane was catapulted from H.M.S. Dorsetshire, which was some distance at sea, at about 10 p.m. Meanwhile, in Hongkong, arrangements were rushed at the Naval Dockyards to provide landing lights for the seaplane which roared to and fro above the harbour until the arrangements were completed.

Searchlights were turned on the harbour from H.M.S. Enterprise and from the Dockyard Wall and a perfect landing was made by the pilot. The work of transferring the sick man from the seaplane to a launch occupied only a few minutes and he was immediately rushed to the Royal Hospital, where surgeons were awaiting his arrival.

OPERATION PUT OFF

Following a thorough examination of O'Shea after he was admitted to hospital, it was decided to defer the operation until this morning. The anaesthetic was administered at 9 a.m., and the operation was being performed as this edition went to press.

PIRATES REPORTED ABOARD TILAWA

Destroyer And Plane Rush To Answer False Alarm

A report that the B.I. liner Tilawa, well known in Hongkong, was pirated when about 200 miles north-west of Singapore, appeared in a recent issue of the Straits Times.

However, after a British destroyer and a flying-boat had been despatched to the rescue from Singapore, the report was found to be false, and the naval vessel and flying-boat were recalled.

The report that the Tilawa was in the hands of pirates reached Singapore on the morning of June 3, and H.M.S. Thetis and a Singapore Short flying-boat from No. 203 Squadron, Seletar, left immediately to locate the ship.

On receipt of further advice shortly before 3 p.m. that the report was incorrect, the destroyer and flying-boat were recalled before either had reached the steamer.

The Tilawa, which is a 10,000-ton liner owned by the British India Line, left Singapore for Hongkong on Thursday June 2.

In addition to a large number of passengers, mainly travelling deck, the liner was believed to be carrying bullion.

The report was surprising because at the time the message was received, the Tilawa would have been near the Anambas, a group of islands far removed from the recognised piracy zone, a stretch of the China Sea extending from Cape St. James, in French Indo-China, up the China Coast.

H.M.S. Thetis arrived from England only on May 31, and is due to continue her voyage to Hongkong at once.

She is a 930-ton destroyer capable of 30 knots. Her main armament comprises three 4-inch guns.

Lt.-Commander R. C. M. White is in command.

SWIFT SERIES OF BLOWS CAUSES FALL OF KEY POSITION

Landing Effected Under Terrific Barrage

Shanghai, June 3.

The fall of Anking, capital of Anhwei province, and the second provincial capital to fall into Japanese hands within a fortnight, has now been definitely established.

Anking has long been regarded as the "Key to Hankow," despite the fact that it is 190 miles from the latter city.

The occupation was completed at 11 p.m. on Sunday by Japanese troops who landed on the northern bank of the Yangtse protected by a terrific barrage from Japanese warships anchored in a long line for several miles up the river.

BRITAIN STEERING CAREFUL COURSE

No Spectacular Action Over Bombing Attacks

London, June 13.
 Mr. Neville Chamberlain, the Prime Minister, will make a statement in the House of Commons to-morrow on the bombing of British ships in Spanish Government ports, in reply to a question from the Labour leader, Mr. Clement R. Attlee.

The statement is not likely to be long and rumours of spectacular British action may be discounted.

The position is difficult, for the Government must consider the non-intervention policy on the one hand and the policy of appeasement of Europe on the other, and desires to avoid anything which might damage what has already been accomplished.

Mr. Chamberlain returned to London to-day and received the American Ambassador, Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, Lord Halifax and Sir Kingsley Wood separately.

The Cabinet is not expected to meet until Wednesday, though there will be informal contacts between ministers to-morrow.

Mr. Malcolm MacDonald will open the debate in the House of Commons with a general review of the Colonial situation. It is doubtful whether Mr. Attlee will move adjournment to discuss the bombing in Spain, as Labour is anxious to deal with the disturbance in Jamaica and the difficulties in Palestine.—Reuter.

KING AND QUEEN WILDLY CHEERED

London, June 14.
 Their Majesties the King and Queen went for a motor drive yesterday afternoon from the Royal Lodge and were wildly cheered by the people along the route.

This is the first time in many days that the Queen has been seen out in public as she has just recovered from a cold.

Their Majesties are remaining at Windsor Castle during Ascot week.—Reuter.

The Japanese concentrated over 100 warships, several of them 10,000-ton cruisers, within a few miles of the capital before they opened their barrage, which was kept up incessantly throughout Sunday. Aeroplanes, in addition, assisted in silencing the Chinese defenders while the landing was under way.

After the Japanese infantry forces landed they enveloped the city from the north and east. The entire operation was in the nature of a surprise to the Chinese defenders, who obviously did not expect an attack of such magnitude.

The Japanese transports and warships, preceded by mine-sweepers, left Wuhan on Saturday night and by 1 a.m. on Sunday had reached Tatung, 60 miles further up the river. The first troops were landed at Tassueh, 12 miles north-east of Anking, at dawn on Sunday, and the fortifications at Chienkiangkou were stormed and occupied before midday.

Almost simultaneously, the main body of Japanese forces was landed at Tawangshiao and Sinkiakou, ten and eight miles respectively east of Anking, and the march on Anking commenced from three directions.

The Japanese were greatly assisted by a dense Yangtse fog, which completely enveloped the district and made defence against an invisible enemy almost hopeless.

In the course of Sunday afternoon and evening, the Japanese occupied one after another the various parts of the city, and at 11 p.m. on Sunday night the Anhwei capital was completely in possession of the invaders.—Trans-Ocean.

STOP PRESS

Seeking To Cut Vital Rail Line

Hankow, June 13.
 Japanese detachments are threatening the Peking-Hankow Railway near Siencheng, some miles south of the Lunghai Railway junction at Chengchow, where 60,000 flood refugees, in addition to thousands of refugees from Kaifeng and other war-torn areas, are awaiting transportation southwards.

A strong Japanese detachment suddenly appeared near Siencheng on Sunday and the Chinese forces there are now endeavouring to prevent it from straddling the railway line, an accomplishment that would make Chengchow a second Hueichow.—Reuter.

Simultaneously with this fighting in the northern area, Japanese forces from Yushih are reported to be attacking Yuchih, while another Japanese column from Luyi is attacking Kwaiyuan, in the vicinity of Yencheng.—Reuter.

English Fashion Expert CECILE LAVIGNE Talks of

Country Clothes

and How to Wear them

Sketches by BENINGTON

THE sort of country clothes you have depends, of course, on what your line of country is.

Spanking high steppers, whose country life consists of long week-ending house-parties, need the entire wardrobe.

They have to have riding, shooting, golfing, hunting, fishing clothes; dancing and dining clothes; sitting-about-the-house clothes; pasting-up-my scrapbook clothes.

So they wear the correct uniforms for all their activities. When it comes to doing nothing at all, they do it in exquisitely cut tweeds, made this year of gay, vivid checks and plaids, or bright contrast colours like flame and bottle, emerald and petunia, cornflower and canary. Their tailored shirts, their severe, high-necked cashmere sweaters, pick up one of the shades in the suit.

They also wear pastel tweed jackets, outlined at revers and edges with dark bands to match dark skirts, pink coats with deep mulberry skirts, hyacinth blue coats with dark navy skirts, yellow coats with deep brown.

DESPITE the growing passion for box coats (and it is going to grow and grow and grow), country-house women seem to be uncommonly faithful to fitted jacket suits.

When they wear fitted jackets, they are fitted. Close, close round the hips, the skirts tight as tight to the hem, with a wrap-over slit at back, or with adroit pleating, front and back, starting just above the knees.

The jackets play about with pockets. Two hip ones will slope to the right. Or there are just two envelope hip pockets.

These beautifully made tweeds are as much a part of England as Dover's cliffs, as round beef, as Browning's April. All other countries are pleased to copy.

A lot of women are veering to the WEEK-END in the country will almost certainly necessitate clothes for tennis and golf in addition to the suit that will carry you happily through the rest of the day. Above, shorts, striped shirt and sweater for early spring days on the tennis court. Below, Check suit showing the longer jacket and amusing pocket plan; and, second, divided skirt, neat waistcoat, and woolen shirt for golf.

culotte suit, whose skirt is trousers—if you get me. The best sort of culotte only reveals its other self in action. Stand still and it is a tight skirt with an inverted pleat front and back, breaking just above knee level.

Box coats are usually worn over tweed or flannel dresses. They are pretty certain to have, for trimming, a series of vertical pockets, real or sham, which appear in the form of slits ending with arrows, brackets or straight flaps.

QUITE a few box jackets are collarless, with a deep blind going round the collar, fronts and hem. Others have a small turn-over Peter Pan pointed collar. Others are double-breasted with plain, high-tailored revers.

Some women, even for elegant country-house visiting, get by on one good suit. When this is necessary, they keep fairly quiet about the suit. They do not run to loud-mouthed checks or plaids, or noisy colours. They choose something that looks right against every background, something unobtrusive that will not bore them or the beholders, yet which has an air, some personality.

The right suit, if it has a versatility of cut, can be worn for almost every country and sporting pursuit, except, of course, riding. You have to be de rigueur here or the horse will feel hurt.

YOU would think that it was almost impossible to go wrong with country clothes to-day. But women do.

I am just back from a few days' stay in a small country hotel, and I have seen far too many mistakes.

There were the pretty blondes who came in, again attended, most evenings after dinner for a drink and a game of darts. The swains were in roughish country clothes, hacking were in roughish country clothes, hacking were in roughish country clothes. But each night these pretty blondes, having apparently semi-dressed for dinner, appeared in plain or print silk frocks, high-heeled delicate shoes, summer ermine coats, quite a lot of bracelets and necklets, fairly heavy make-ups, and heavy perfumes. Their darts were awful.

ANOTHER regular thought she was cutting a dash in a black collarless redingote, with a dressy centre-front buckle and fuchsia scarf. (Quite a good town outfit, this). Entering, the scarf was round her head, peasant style, as a sop, no doubt, to the prevalent country mode. Then she would take it off, tuck it in her neck, and reveal—horrors—two tiny fuchsia bows in her carefully waved head.

My dear foolish at a party, yes, though for you it would be better if you didn't wear bows. But down in rural Suffolk, rubbing shoulders with tweeds and woollens, and farmers' talk, no, no.

I SAW at least five girls wearing trousers with high-heeled shoes and rather fancyish jumpers. Now trousers are grand in the country if they are man tailored and worn with flat heels, severe shirts and woollens. Otherwise they look frightful.

I felt quite proud looking round like a mothering hen at the clothes of my own friends. They seemed right, fitting, gay, attractive.

A blue-eyed mousy-blond played the changes game with a light blue and tan check tweed suit. The jacket was a severe classic, with good lines, good buttons, good revers.

One skirt of the same stuff had the checks going diagonally against the jacket's straight, square checks. It was tight to the hips, then flared just a little to the hem. With this she wore a tan high-neck sweater and a large baroque gilt clip. (Sounds awful, looked perfect.) Her other skirt was plain tan, with plenty stitched down to mid thigh, then loose. With this a blue silk shirt. No hat. Tan shoes again, tan gloves, bag.

A BROWN-eyed games player spent most of her time in a rusty brown tweed suit with high rounded revers and the longer jacket of this year's fancy, double breasted, with brown leather buttons, stitched round in white. Her shirt and sweater were bottle green, her brogue tan.

Another girl looked slightly casual in grey chalk-striped flannel slacks with a matching, very macabre, coat over a bright red shirt. Flat black suede shoes, and no handbag. Never carry a handbag with trousers.

It is queer about trousers. After all, we have been wearing them for years now, this year more than ever. But in a remote country place the villagers will regard their wearers with curiosity and suspicion. The village boys are inclined to call after you. Let them call.

CUT THIS OUT

Recipe . . . Meringue Flan

LINE a pie-plate with short-crust pastry, weight the inside with raw rice arranged on greased paper, and bake until the pastry is cooked. Remove the rice and paper.

Cut some rhubarb into short lengths, drop into boiling sugar and water syrup well flavoured with lemon juice, and cook just long enough for it to become tender without breaking, a matter of seconds if the fruit is young. Strain off the syrup, and arrange the rhubarb over the pastry.

Pile on top the whites of two eggs whipped very stiffly with a tablespoonful of caster sugar, dredge with more caster sugar, and return to the oven until the meringue is lightly browned on top. Good served hot or cold.

The left-over syrup, boiled with the thinly pared coloured rind and the juice of two oranges and sufficient water to taste, makes an excellent thirst-quenching drink—especially if it is chilled.

VANITY NOTES

WHEN you come home weary and aching after a hectic day treat yourself to the luxury of a foam bath. It's not an expensive luxury: the special foam bath cubes we've discovered cost only 20 cents each. You crush one or two cubes, scatter them in the bath, turn on the taps, and in a minute the bath is a mass of deliciously scented foam. As you lie back in it all your tiredness floats away, and you feel both stimulated and refreshed. The foam makes the water as soft as rainwater, delightful to wash in. If you take these foam baths often, you'll find they have a definite slenderizing effect.

Lovely Hands

AS summer approaches any useful pair of hands must face up to gardening, salty seawater, scratchy sand, and still look graceful and well cared for when night falls. Only constant attention to them will give you hands like these, but when hands and nails can be cared for by using one hand lotion, beautiful hands don't seem so far off.

The new preparation we've found cleanses the hands, its Vitamin F content makes up for any fat deficiency in the skin, it removes any lime deposits left by soap (these make your hands dry and papery in time), it softens the nails, and brings all rugged cuticles back into line—and, of course, it softens and whitens while all this is going on.

Remember that your hands are for ever doing something that draws attention to them, so you can't afford to be without this new super-effective lotion, selling for the small sum of half a crown a bottle.

Help Kidneys

Don't Take Drastic Drugs

Your kidneys have also million tiny tubes or filters which are endangered by neglect or drastic, irritating drugs. Beware! If kidney trouble or bladder weakness makes you suffer from Getting Up Nights, Leg Pains, Nervousness, Headaches, Stiffness, Stomach Pain, Lumbago, Circles Under Eyes, Swollen Ankles, Numbness, Burning, Itching, Smarting, Acidity or Loss of Vigour, don't delay. Try the Doctor's new discovery called Cystex (Glaxo). Soothes, tones, cleanses, and heals sick kidneys. Starts work in 15 minutes. Brings new health, youth and vitality in 48 hours. END OF "SNATCH-BACK"

Tories' Praise For Miss Wilkinson

Miss Ellen Wilkinson's Hire-Purchase Bill passed triumphantly through the House of Commons recently without a division. It now goes to the Lords and has every chance of becoming law.

Bouquets from members of all parties, and even the Government that she so frequently attacks, were showered on Miss Wilkinson (Lab., Jarrow) for the skilful way in which she had steered the Bill through difficult waters.

The Bill is mainly designed to prevent unscrupulous firms from snatching back goods on which the instalments have nearly all been paid.

It provides that:

After one-third of the hire-purchase price has been paid the owner of the goods cannot take them back without the hirer's consent unless the owner obtains an order of the Court. If the owner applies to the Court for such an order the Court may allow the hirer to keep the goods on such conditions as the Court thinks just.

In the earlier stages of the Bill it was watered down a good deal to placate opposition, and yesterday an amendment to exclude motor-cars from its scope, moved by Miss Wilkinson, was carried, but it was generally agreed that much of value still remained.

THE FIRST BOUQUET

Moving the third reading, Miss Wilkinson opened the presentation of bouquets by thanking the Law Officers of the Crown. Without their help, she said, it would have been impossible for a private member to have piloted through the House so complicated a measure and one which affected so many traders.

She also thanked members who had waived objections on minor points in order not to endanger the passing of a Bill which would definitely end a scandal. Many poor people would be the happier for its passing.

One of her most persistent political opponents, Mr. H. G. Williams (Con. Croydon S.), said she had formed the first Popular Front in this country and had completely enslaved the Attorney-General and the whole of the Government Departments. (Laughter.) It was the most remarkable Parliamentary achievement for many years.

All smiles, Sir Donald Somervell (Attorney-General) added his congratulations.

A HEAVY BURDEN

As the Bill was originally presented, he said, it was in a form which required a great deal of recasting in order to carry out the intentions of the promoters, and it had thrown a heavy burden on Parliamentary counsel.

During the committee stage an amendment was moved to except railway waggons from the Bill, and Miss Wilkinson told the committee that she was not prepared to do in the last ditch for a railway wagon. (Laughter.)

She was extremely wise in meeting what were really minor points. Through arduous negotiations she had kept her patience, and it was a remarkable tribute to her that the ultimate amendments should have been passed with such general agreement.

After other members had presented more bouquets, the third reading was agreed to amid cheers. Sir Donald Somervell crossed the floor to shake hands warmly with Miss Wilkinson, and others crowded round her for the same purpose.

DOGS AND HORSES TO HAVE GAS MASKS

London.

Dogs and horses will have gasmasks but British cats must depend on their surplus lives during air raids in the next war. The Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals discourages any attempt to fit pussy with a gasmask, saying the suffering caused by a mask is worse than that caused by an air raid.

Being left to their fate, however, will not worry the cats of this hardy Isle as they are made of stern stuff. One cat in London recently was given up for dead after a house fire that suffocated three dogs and the canary. The cat was left in the garden for later burial but seven hours afterwards it completely revived.

Those who went through the air raids during the World War recall that their cats readily adapted themselves. When the bombs started dropping, the cats were the first to dive for the cellar and the last to come out.—United Press.

Air Raid Warning To London City Might Have 5,000 Fires At One Time

Five thousand simultaneous fires started by each air raid was probably not an extravagant estimate, said Commander A. N. G. Firebrace, London Fire Brigade chief officer, addressing members of the Women's Auxiliary Service and the Women's Reserve in London.

It had been said that they might expect from three to six raids a day. Each raid might be made by from 100 to 150 bombers, and even a medium bomber could carry 1,000 to 2,000 incendiary bombs. He added: "Every house, block of flats, hotel, factory, warehouse should have its own private fire brigade or fire-fighting equipment."

POLICE SEIZE YACHT IN NUFFIELD CASE

London, May 26.

Police at Pin Mill, near Ipswich, seized the luxury 11-ton motor yacht Pierrette which was given as the address of John Bruce Thornton, fifty-year-old man arrested by armed police on Tuesday night after an incident in which Lord Nuffield was involved.

Thornton, who was remanded until to-morrow at Oxford yesterday on a charge of being in possession of firearms with intent to endanger life—he appeared before only one magistrate at the police station—brought the Pierrette, with a companion, up the River Orwell on Sunday night and anchored at Pin Mill, a popular Suffolk yachting centre.

'WENT AGROUND'

The two men arranged with Mr. Eric Ward, a local boatman, to look after the Pierrette, and left later in the evening by bus for Ipswich.

Last night Mr. Ward said: "The Pierrette went on to the ground, and I went out in my motor-launch and towed her into deep water."

"Thornton, a tall, grey-haired man, was on board with another man about his own age."

The Pierrette is owned by Mr. H. C. H. Bull, of Arthur-court, Queen's-road, W, a City business man.

He said last night: "It was chartered for a month by a fellow member of the Royal Thames Yacht Club."

"The Pierrette was lying at West Mersea, Essex, where I do most of my sailing, and it was from there that she was sailed to Pin Mill."

'GRAND SEA BOAT'

"She was built in 1902 and is a grand sea boat equipped with a petrol motor."

Lord Nuffield and a friend, Mr. Kennerley Rumbold, husband of the late Dame Clara Butt, were working late at the Morris motor works, at Cowley, near Oxford, on Tuesday night when an alarm was raised.

The arrest a few minutes later—by police using Lord Nuffield's own car—was seen by many people.

Another man was questioned yesterday by Chief Constable Fox of Oxford.

Lord Nuffield spent an hour at Oxford Police Station yesterday morning.

"PERFECT" DINERS TUCK NAPKINS UNDER CHINS

— Chicago is Telling Us

Ten rules for the perfect dinner have been drawn up by a group of Chicago chefs. They include:

No shop talk; no discussion of politics or religion;
No cocktails containing spirits before dinner;
Table napkins to be tucked under the chin;
No "nursing" of wines; each wine to be removed after its appropriate course;
Any guest over-indulging to leave the table.

Mr. A. J. A. Symons, secretary of the Wine and Food Society, challenges the rule on the "nursing" of wines. Speaking to a reporter, he said:

CUDDLING WINE

"If they do not have to 'nurse' wines in Chicago, they are very lucky. Certain wines should be drunk at the temperature of the room, and if, as is usually the case, a cellar keeps the wine too cool, the only thing to do is 'nurse' it—i.e., cuddle the glass in the palms of the hands."

"The ideal is to keep wine in the room for 24 hours before it is drunk. But 'nursing' is infinitely preferable to plunging it in warm water to bring it up to the required temperature."

AS YOU PLEASE

"As to the napkin, it does not matter where you place it. Most Continental epicures do tuck it into the collar. With certain dishes—such as Moules Marinières (mussels in a sauce, eaten direct from the shell)—this can be an advantage."

"Incidentally, I prefer to have all the glasses left on the table until the end of the meal. Then one can review one's first opinion of the wine one has tried an hour or so before."

"There should be one more rule. The hands should be washed in non-scented soap before dinner. Otherwise one perceives the aroma of the soap instead of the bouquet of the wine."

None of the great hotels would commit themselves to approval or disapproval of Mr. Symons' views. The answers of all were identical.

"Any comment we might make would seem to reflect on our patrons."

But about one of the rules for the perfect dinner there will be no disagreement: "No speeches."

Suspected
Kidnapper
Committed

London, June 13.
Charged with possession of arms and intention to endanger life, John Bruce Thornton, central figure in the sensational alleged attempt to kidnap Lord Nuffield, has been committed to stand trial at Old Bailey.

Thornton pleaded not guilty to both charges and reserved his defence. Bail was granted in a sum of £100 and his own surety of £200.

The case arose out of an alleged plot to kidnap Lord Nuffield and hold him aboard a yacht for a price of £200,000.

According to the prosecution, Thornton approached Lord Nuffield as an American journalist and was about to carry out his plans when police swooped down and arrested him. The police acted on information received from Major Ransden, who, ostensibly riding, Thornton, was actually acting under police instructions.—Reuter.

JAPANESE RETREAT

and all-powerful enemy, and Kaitung has been abandoned by Chinese and Japanese alike.

Thousands In Flight

Thousands of refugees are fleeing before the flood waters in the direction of Chengchow, where over 50,000 already arrived.

Famine is adding to the horrors of the situation. Its supplies already over-taxed by war refugees, Chengchow is making desperate efforts to obtain food supplies from Hankow, but work in this direction is hampered, firstly, by the fact that the railway is being taxed to its limits by military demands and, secondly, by the Japanese threat to communications 30 miles south of the junction city.

It is feared that within a very short time the whole of the vast Honan plains—thousands of square miles of undulating country—will be flooded.

The Chinese and Japanese accuse each other of responsibility for retarding the demon that is now threatening to consume both. The Chinese assert that the Japanese chose this method of decimating the defenceless civilian population in order to ensure that no guerrillas would hamper their advance on Hankow.

The Japanese, on the other hand, declare that the dykes have been destroyed by the Chinese with the object of discrediting the Japanese.

Millions Endangered

There is no doubt that the plight of the millions of people of Honan, already rendered precarious by war, has been made doubly serious by the new flood threat.

It is believed that at least 35,000,000 people in the province will be exposed to danger by the floods.

It is inconceivable that China, with painful knowledge in past centuries of the terrible destruction wrought by uncontrolled waters from the Yellow River, would deliberately bring death and misery to so vast a part of its population.

Yet there is no gainsaying the fact that the floods sweeping across the Plains of Honan will seriously impede the Japanese operations. Any hope Japan may have had of advancing on Hankow across Honan or along the Peiping-Hankow Railway has been virtually ended by the new enemy, which is conquerable only by the will of Providence.—Trans-Ocean.

China Fleet

London, June 13.

A Shanghai-born Admiral of the Royal Navy, and former Commander-in-Chief of China Station, has just been appointed Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty and Chief of Naval Personnel, in succession to Admiral Sir M. E. Dunbar-Nasmith. He is Admiral Sir Charles Little.

Until last year Sir Charles was Commander-in-Chief of the China Squadron. Admiral Little was forced to relinquish his Hongkong post through ill-health and was relieved by the present Commander-in-Chief, Admiral Sir Percy Noble.

The appointment to the Admiralty becomes effective on September 30.—Reuter.

Admiral Little was born in Shanghai in June, 1882, and was the son of the late Dr. L. S. Little, who at one time practised in Shanghai. Admiral Little's early education was received in the one-time famous Shanghai Institution, George Lane's school, and later in the training ship Britannia.

Because he is tall and burly the Navy knows him as "Tiny" Little. For over 30 years he was in the submarine service, and during the war commanded first the submarines of the Dover patrol and later those of the Grand Fleet.

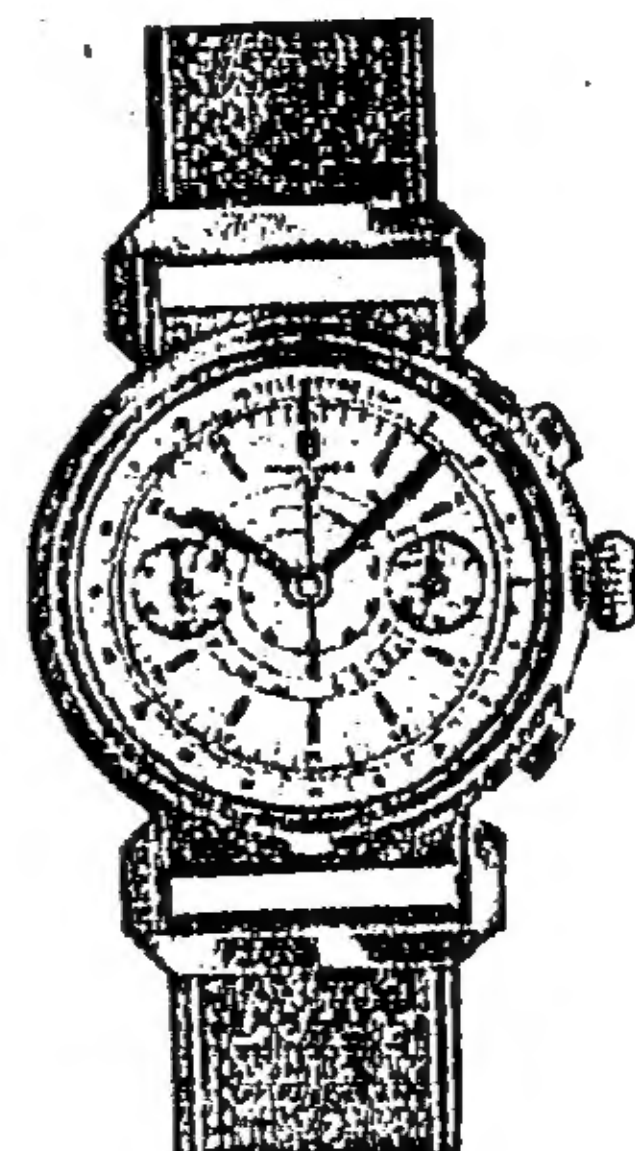

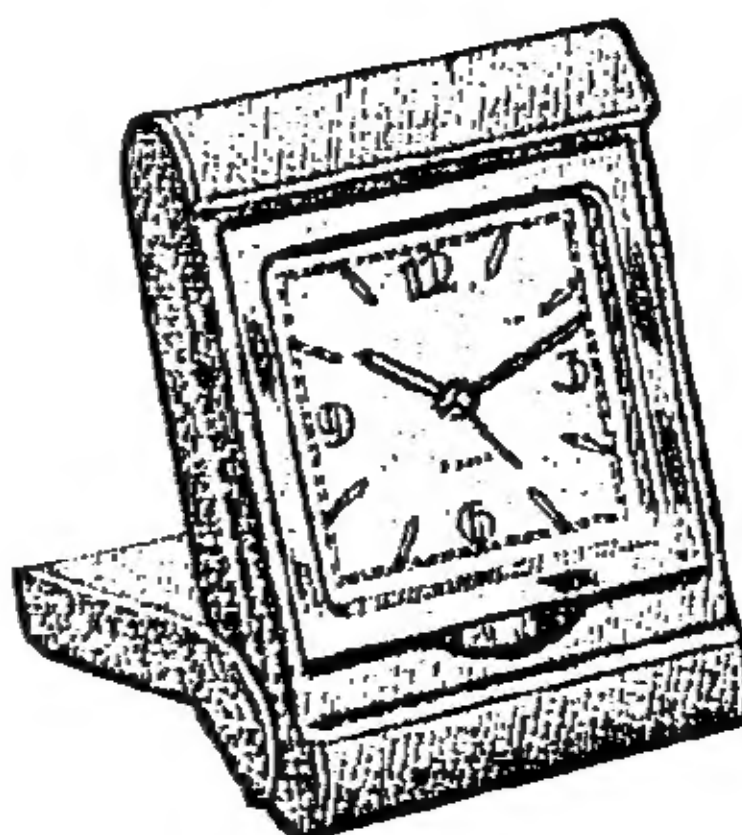

junction of the Lanchow and Peiping-Hankow Railway, has been stopped by floods, enemy of Japanese and Chinese alike.

The Japanese admit that the breaches in the Yellow River dykes, above the Lanchow Railway, between Chengchow and Kaitung, are causing serious floods, and are holding up their advance to Chengchow.

Many of these breaches are up to 12½ yards wide.

The Japanese are concentrating every effort upon repairing them. They claim they are assisted by thousands of farmers who are threatened with death and ruin by the rising tide of red-brown, sand-laden waters tearing down from the source of "China's sorrow" high in the Tibetan mountains.

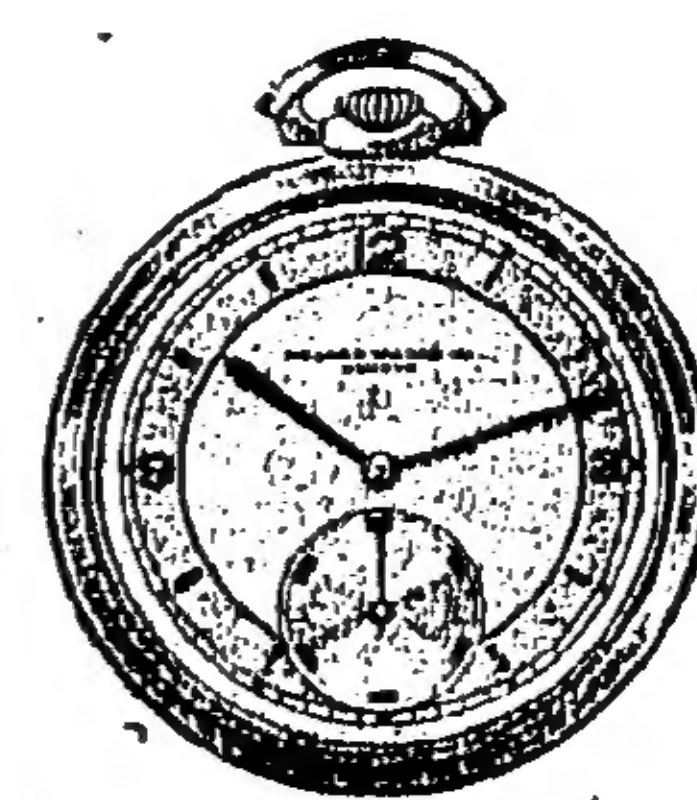

Floodwaters are pouring rapidly towards the Lanchow Railway.—Reuter.

Bangkok, June 13.

Wing Commander A. G. Bishop, formerly R.A.F. Lincolshire, Hongkong, has been appointed Air Attache to the British Embassy in Siam.

Great Britain is thus the first Power to possess accredited military, naval and air attaches in Siam.—Reuter.

Wing Commander Bishop left Hongkong two months ago after being stationed here since 1935.

He is a graduate of the Staff College. He began his service in August, 1912, as second lieutenant in the Royal Marine Light Infantry, was attached to R.N. air units in East Africa and Iraq, and became a pilot in 1916.

A permanent commission as flight lieutenant was granted him in August, 1919, and he was promoted to squadron leader in 1928, while in India, where he served with No. 1 Group at Peshawar from 1924 to 1930.

Shanghai, June 13.

Attention is being paid by the Chinese authorities to the activities of mobile units in the suburbs of Shanghai and Pootung, according to a Japanese report. The report states that recently a conference was held at Pootung between guerrilla leaders and representatives from Hankow. It is reported that money has been remitted here from Hongkong through local foreign banks for the guerrillas.

Dr. F. C. Yen, with General Tait Cheng-cheun, came here to make arrangements to finance the activities of the mobile units, the report declares. Gen. Tait is reported to be discussing with the leaders of the mobile units' future activities.

A Chinese civil organisation at Pootung is organising a police force of 800 men, according to a Chinese report.

The system of lien pao has been adopted by the regime in the area to prevent anyone from joining the guerrillas. The conduct of every person has to be guaranteed by 10 families. SUPPRESSION
OF HAWKERS

Yesterday a Hongkong magistrate expressed the opinion that the police of the Colony were "working overtime to no good purpose" in arresting eighty-six hawkers in Wanchai and West Point during the week-end. The magistrate is a busy man and anyone can understand and appreciate his very human exasperation at having these cases put before him when important matters are occupying his mind. And in spite of the fact that the police appear to think it so, the rounding up of these unfortunate hawkers is not important, relatively speaking, to the welfare of Hongkong. Most of them appear to be inoffensive enough, trying to earn an honest living, which is more than can be said for a considerable proportion of the lower class element of this community. The scores of cases of snatching and other minor crimes which come before the magistrates are proof enough on that point. Besides, it is considerably better to have hawkers, even unlicensed hawkers, peddling their pitiful goods in the streets and making enough money to buy themselves a bowl or two of rice and fish, than to have them begging in their full force. The magistrate, commenting on the question of licensing these people, observed that it appeared to be easier for young men and women to procure permission to sell their little wares than for the old ones. Surely this is manifestly unfair. Without any knowledge of the requirements of the requirements of the authorities which issue these licences, it is impossible to criticise. But on the evidence of the magistrate himself it appears that something is radically wrong with the system. If old people are to be deprived of the opportunity of making a meagre living as hawkers, they have no recourse, in most instances, except to turn to mendicancy. They are too slow, in all probability, to be successful thieves. One would think that they would be given all the assistance possible by authority to keep them out of mischief. It is a shame to punish them for trying to earn enough to live on in the only way that seems to be open to them. It is not too much to say that Hongkong possesses one of the finest police forces in the Far East. Anyone who has had an opportunity to see the officers of pioneer of the movement to combat the injustice of malicious wills. The Inheritance Bill, which is expected to become law in July, will give power of redress to those unfortunate wives, children—and husbands—who may be "cut off with a shilling."

A SHADOW of an old injustice lying over the homes of innocent English people is within measurable distance of being swept away for ever. This is the scandal of unjust wills, by which loyal and blameless wives or families are left destitute through the whim or cruel spite of those from whom they naturally expected help.

A Private Member's Bill, which has just been passed unopposed at the Third Reading, has opened the gates of justice for numerous possible victims of the future.

If this Bill—the Inheritance (Family Provision) Bill, which was so ably piloted by Mr. Stanley Holmes, is equally successful in the Lords, it will be a further proof that the private member may still be the means of putting on the Statute Book really important reforms.

In the debate on the Third Reading I described myself as the "great-grand-mother" of the Bill, and my mind went back to the first measure dealing with the evil of the disinherited family, which I introduced in 1931.

Tyrannical Spite

THIS was based on the principle of Scottish and Continental Law, also followed in certain States in America, whereby the surviving spouse or child has a statutory right to a fixed proportion of the estate.

That Bill was referred to a Joint Select Committee of both Houses of Parliament, which reported that a reform was desirable, but that it preferred the plan followed in many parts of the Dominions whereby a disinherited wife, husband or child has the right of appeal to the courts.

These, at their discretion, order suitable provision to be made out of the estate.

As it has passed the House of Commons, the present Bill represents a compromise. It does not give everything that some of us would wish.

But it does provide at last what English law, alone among the codes of civilised countries, has lacked for so long.

Husbands, wives, or children disinherited through no fault of their own, by some tyrannical spite or senile whim, are given some protection.

Right of appeal against an alleged "unjust will" is granted, this body in action, from constables to the most senior officers, knows that without being told. In an emergency they are cool, calm and highly efficient. But it does not require any immense courage or ability to round up 86 hawkers. It would seem that Hongkong is so well policed that officers are able to concentrate on these unfortunate offenders against our code. The thought that they have nothing more important to do should really be gratifying. But to be candid, a good many people feel, with the magistrate who first raised the criticism, that the prosecution of hawkers—particularly those who are not permanent nuisances—is rather more than a waste of time. It is almost persecution.

under the Bill, only to the husband or wife of the testator; children under 21; or, if over 21, to unmarried daughters and disabled sons.

Except in the case of estates of less than £2,000 in value, the court can only make provision from the income, and not from the capital of the estate.

In cases where the testator left wife or husband and one or more dependents, the court might order that reasonable provision be made, provided the amount of such annual income did not exceed two-thirds of the total income of the estate.

Where wife or husband only, or dependents only, are left, the amount of annual income which the court might order to be provided should not be more than one-half of the total income of the estate.

Full regard must be given to all relevant circumstances, including the conduct of the disinherited person, and any just reason for the disinheritance, before a decision is given.

Opponents of the Bill have often urged that there are few hard cases under the existing law.

They would change their estimate of the degree of suffering caused by the Englishman's right to cut off his family with the proverbial shilling if they could read through the files of letters which I and other promoters of the Bill have received from every part of the country.

The most frequent cause of the tragedy is the "second woman," to whom the husband transfers his affections when his wife grows old.

Typical of these cases is that of the widow of a medical practitioner in Lancashire of whom I have heard. Married when her husband was only a student, she even entered domestic service to enable him to have money to take his degree.

For many years they were happily married. Then her husband met a younger woman, to whom he left all his money. Now his widow is almost penniless. She just manages to exist on some public relief, and on slender assistance from her father, who has an old-age pension.

I have before me a letter from a woman living at a South Coast town, who says:

My father died in 1907 leaving £60,000. He left my mother an annuity of £250, and his four daughters an annuity of £60. The remainder was left to a religious body. We could not upset the will on grounds of insanity, though he suffered from intense religious mania.

Our old home near London was left to my mother for her lifetime. She cannot afford to live in it. At her death it goes to the religious body. At our death this gets the whole estate.

We were good, and obedient children and did nothing to deserve this harsh treatment.

MANY of the cases brought to my notice reveal a degree of spite and vindictiveness which is almost incredible.

A City of London solicitor tells me of a woman client who was left a widow with four children by the sudden death of her husband, a business man working in India.

After living with her husband in India for 17 years she came to England to educate the children.

While she was using her own

HAMISH FRASER, tells how
helps your doctor

HYPNOTISM is to be used to restore normal balance to a girl with a mental kink whose recurrent turns of irresponsibility led her into the dock of a police court.

What is this hypnotism? Nothing new, because in the middle of last century Mesmer, calling it then "Animal Magnetism," was attracting throngs to public displays of the mysterious power.

What is new is that we know pretty exactly now what it is, what it can be used for, what it can't do. We know it is no weapon for the villain seeking an innocent tool to commit a crime; that stories of its power being used to convey people in trance over physical obstacles such as unbridged chasms are fantasy; that it is not a certain cure for all types of nervous disorder.

Used Daily

WE know the exercise of the power requires no supernatural gifts, but is within the reach of anyone with a ready tongue; that it can benefit thousands of cases of minor trouble such as those of students approaching an examination who want to work but cannot concentrate; that it is a short cut daily employed in psychological clinics to obviate months of painful questioning which lead little farther towards the elucidation of the source of trouble.

Essentially the technique is that of high-pressure salesmanship. There's not much difference in kind whether I set out to convince you that I have a powder which, sprinkled on your lawn, will make mowing unnecessary, or that you are far from being a human mouse, but actually a lion that has only got to step out to secure your proper share of good fortune.

You would like to be able to deal with your lawn so easily; you would like to be a human lion. To achieve the latter is much easier.

The he-man properties are already there, but dormant; kept in check by fears.

These fears may be due to something simple, such as the fact that they laughed at you at school because your face was always spotty, because old-fashioned parents kept you in shorts long after contemporaries were arrayed in the dignity of trousers. They may be due to something farther back of which you are unaware.

Fears

HYPNOTISM puts the patient into a receptive frame of mind so that his fears are revealed. The queries and commands of the doctor are those of a master. Told to explain his motives for doing certain acts he does so with a wealth of detail he would shrink from in a normal state.

Told that his fears of ridicule are absurd he accepts the statement in his trance without question, and acts afterwards on that principle in normal life without being really aware of the artificial nature of the boost given him.

Psycho-analysis thus seeks to uncover the causes of fears, hypnotism to strengthen resistance to them. Either method is suitable in differing cases.

Being hypnotised is a delightful process if you aren't afraid of it. I have done it to others, to myself, and had it done to me.

You lie on a comfortable couch in a half-dark room. You must be very comfortably dressed, warm, and quite relaxed. The operator talks at you, and goes on talking; the drone is incessant but comforting. You are very warm, very comfortable, very lazy, sleeper and sleeper, more and more reluctant to quarrel with the nonsense talked to you.

You find your limbs moving effortlessly at the operator's command; that a sharp pinch imparts no pain. You know he is all right. What he says goes. You lose interest, and wake up at last at his orders, rather disappointed it is finished.

Now not everyone can be put under easily. That. Easy subjects are blue fellows, ready to listen to anyone's tale of misfortune, to laugh at their own mistakes. One might think they would never have need of treatment themselves. Yet, actually they are of a type that tends to run through life in a series of peaks and depressions.

What they need is temporary control until the pendulum swings the other way. Hypnotism can help them back to normal.

Inaccessible, however, are the quiet people who dwell predominantly in an inner life, observing the real world as it were through a pane of glass which shields their sensitive natures from ordinary contacts. Instinctively they shrink from the attempts of the hypnotist to take control, for he is apt to be no magic to distinguish him from the crowd.

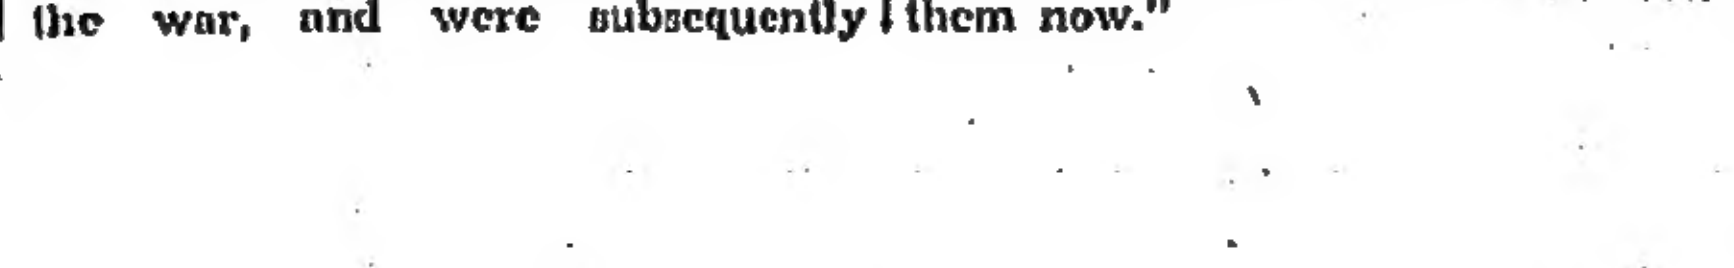

So they listen acquiescently to all he says, while an inner voice all the time says, "What a dull bore!" And they don't respond in the slightest.

Now, you people who are feeling desperate about your nerves, don't be afraid of going to a specialist about it; don't say, "I won't let you put me to sleep; I'm afraid." If you are the wrong type to get benefit all the time, and secondly the doctor's words are not dream of, apply those of a master. Told to ex-

K.C.C. AND U.S.R.C. WIN MIXED DOUBLES TENNIS

HONGKONG C.C. UNDER-RATED BY OPPONENTS

RECREIO OUTCLASSED BY LAST YEAR'S CHAMPIONS

(By "Veritas")

Tennis of varying degrees was seen in the mixed doubles league match yesterday between K.C.C. (A) and the Hongkong Cricket Club, which the first-named team won at 6-3. The impression was that the winners were inclined to underestimate their visitors, otherwise they might have won by a more substantial margin.

The lady players in the Cricket club team gave a good account of themselves, especially Miss Dodwell who served strongly, though her timing was not ideal, and who also displayed a propensity for securing quick points. Mrs. Whitman was in good form, but her partner, H. J. Armstrong, was not quite strong enough to stand up to his opposite numbers. Mrs. Finlay, formerly Miss Joa Massey of Shanghai, hit the ball furiously, and displayed a drive-alley which, when it came off, was an unreturnable shot. Nevertheless, she was erratic, and the points that she scored with a sizzling drive from the net, hardly compensated for the numerous mistakes which also came from her racket.

Among the visiting men players, T. A. Pearce played stylishly and quite extremely well to win two and a half sets. His only weakness was off the ground when in midcourt, but on the volley and overhead, he was impeccable.

Owen-Hughes strove manfully, but attempted just a little too much, his volleying sorties leaving him with a debit balance of points. Perhaps he was too much upset by the result of the first set which he and his partner lost to Teddy Fincher and Mrs. William 4-6, after leading four-love.

E. C. FINCHER EXCELS

Teddy Fincher again excelled himself and was always scoring with his adroit placements, made with such effortless ease. He and his partner should have beaten Pearce and Miss Dodwell, for they led 4-2, but then lost the advantage. It was not Mrs. Williams' happiest day, and apart from a few nicely-made backhand drives, her display was undistinguished.

Ernest Fincher, finding a court which suited, served with telling effect, and in every respect played good, reliable tennis. Mrs. Barnett was chiefly notable for some lovely cross-court backhanders which more often than not scored outright.

Gordon Burnett's excellent form this season has been the feature of K.C.C. league tennis, and yesterday he again struck his best form. One remembered with special delight his clever return of service and brilliant volleying. It is a pity that Mrs. Clarke his partner, depends so much on defensive measures. A little more enterprise and this couple could rank among the best in the league.

The tennis generally was worthy of the teams, though there were some astonishing lapses by nearly all the players. The state of the courts may have had something to do with this, while it was noticeable that in the last sets, the light was not too good. Visiting the Club de Recreio, the United Services R.C., last year's champions, were far too good for their hosts and won by eight sets to one. Recreio's solitary points were scored by J. Goncalves and Miss C.

Botelho over Lieut. Misra and Mrs. Holmes.

RECREIO v. U.S.R.C.

K.C.C. v. H.K.C.C.

Kowloon Cricket Club beat HKCC 6-1. Mrs. Williams and E. C. Fincher beat Mrs. J. Finlay and H. Owen-Hughes 6-4; beat Mrs. J. P. Whitman and H. Armstrong 6-1; drew with Miss D. Dodwell and T. A. Pearce 6-6.

Mrs. Clarke and G. C. Burnett drew with Mrs. Finlay and Owen-Hughes 6-6; beat Mrs. Whitman and Armstrong 6-3; beat Mrs. Barnett and E. F. Fincher 6-2; beat Mrs. Finlay and Owen-Hughes 6-3; lost to Mrs. Whitman and Armstrong 6-3; lost to Mrs. Dodwell and Pearce 6-3.

YORKSHIRE OVERCOMES MIDDLESEX

Comfortable Win In County Cricket

London, June 13. In the County Cricket Championship, Yorkshire defeated Middlesex by seven wickets.

Middlesex scored 105 (Layland four for 15) and 148 (Bowes four for 35), while Yorkshire made 173 (R. W. V. Robins four for 24) and 84 for three.

SOMERSET BEAT NOTTS

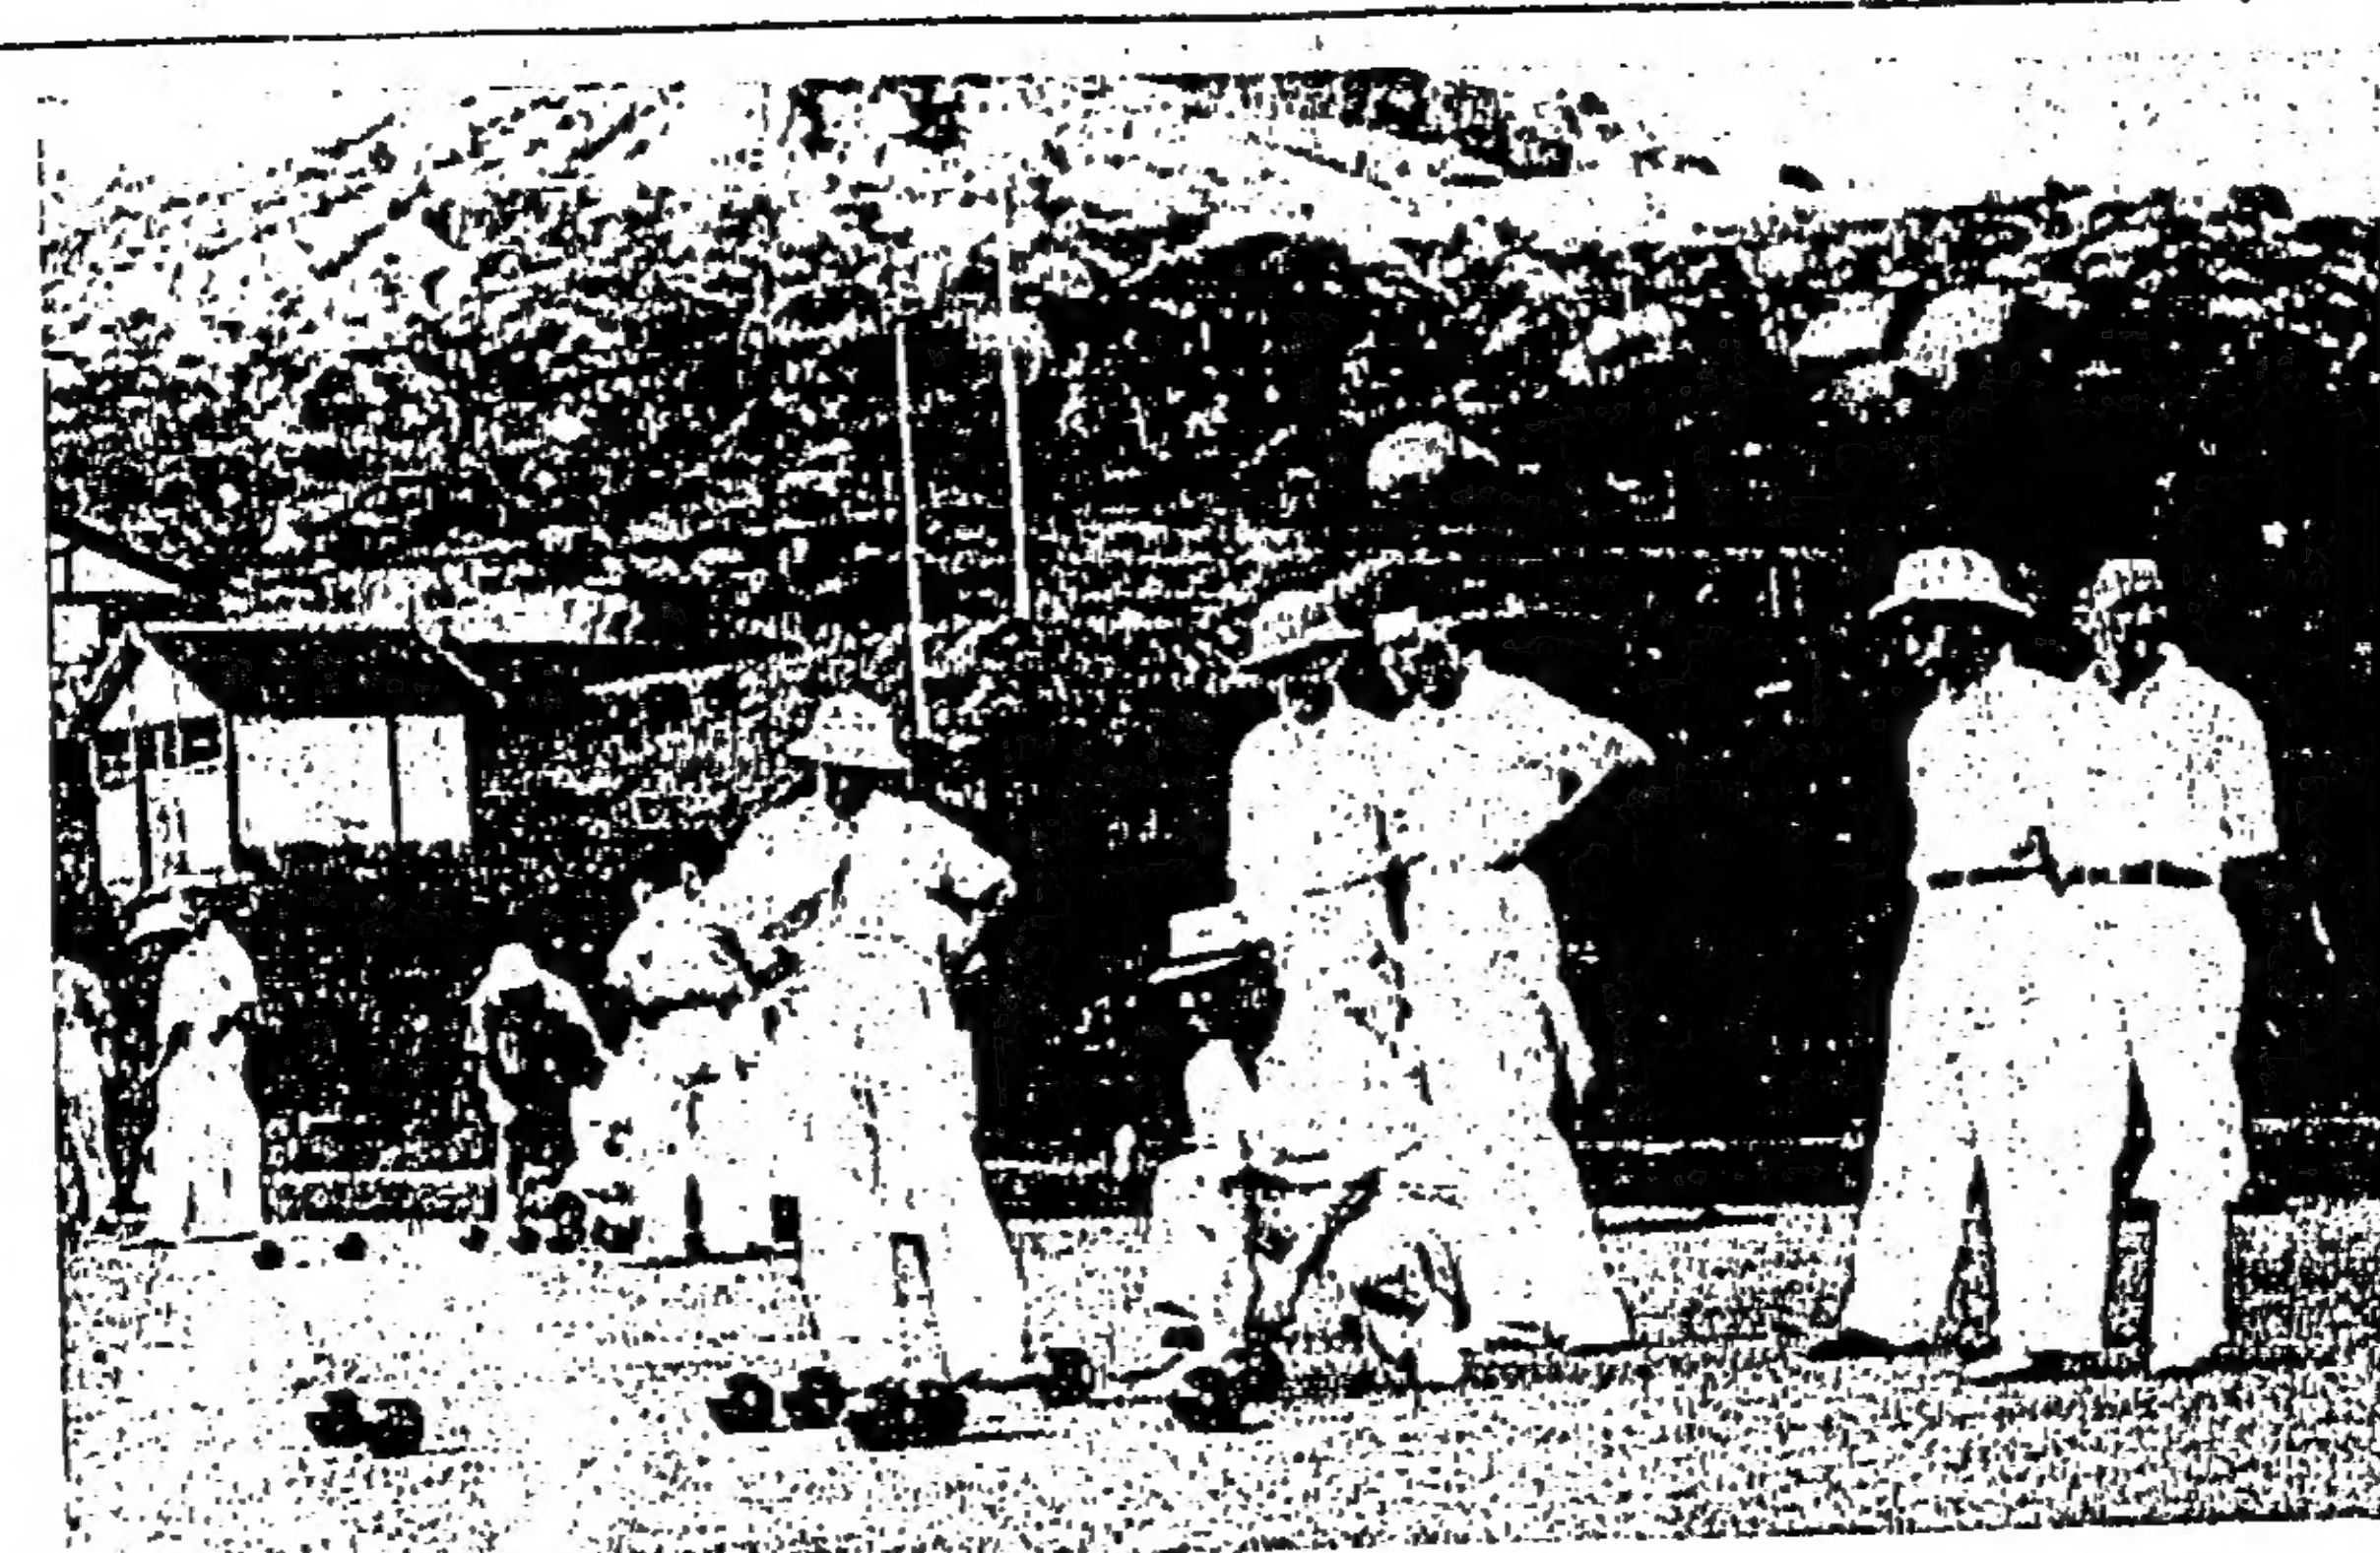

Somerset defeated Notts comfortably, winning by ten wickets. Notts scored 171 (Andrews six for 51) and 178 (Andrews four for 36), while Somerset had 298 and 52 for no wicket.

DERBY WINS EASILY

Playing against Kent, Derbyshire won by an innings and 86 runs. Derby's only visit to the wicket realised 437, Smith contributing 122. Kent scored 167 in their first innings. Alfred Pope taking five for 68, in the follow-on Kent made 184, this time George Pope taking seven for 57. George Pope was one of the 13 originally selected for the Test match against the Australians, but was dropped.—Reuter.

BASEBALL TEAMS TAKE A REST

New York, June 13. No baseball was played in the country to-day. All the teams are taking a rest.—Reuter.

FURTHER PROGRESS MADE IN PAIRS BOWLS TOURNAMENT

Further progress was made in the second round of the Lawn Bowls Pairs championship yesterday, four matches being decided on the Club de Recreio green and two on the Police R.C. green.

G. N. Mitchell and J. C. Brown had a comparatively easy passage against T. F. Stinton and J. A. Watson, of Talkoo R.C., winning by 32-8. By the end of the sixth head, Mitchell and Brown were leading 11-0, which became 25-3 on the 15th. The losers scored only on five heads.

S. M. White and S. Randle also had a comfortable victory, their victims being S. O. Bux and S. M. Rumljan, of the Indian R.C. White and Randle started off with a three and two, but the Indians retaliated with a single and a five, which took them to within a shot of their opponents' score. At the eighth, the scores were tied at 8-8, but thereafter Bux and Rumljan faded away completely. White and Randle finally won by 36-12.

But for a six on the 15th head, S. Randle and G. H. Sheriff would have been in a very bad way against G. C. Norman and J. G. Meyer. Even as it was, they were beaten by 26-11. Consistency was the keynote of the winners' display, they scored on 11 heads in succession, from the fourth to the 14th inclusive, and then dropped a six, but they came back with a three and three singles on the succeeding heads. Eccleshall and Sheriff finished with a single and a couple.

EVEN FIGHT

T. Coleman and T. Ferguson had an even fight with W. Cameron and W. McHardy, of the Police R.C., and won by 24-19. The scores were very even up to the 18th head. At the 18th, Cameron and McHardy were leading 18-14, but a three and a two swung the balance of the game round for Coleman and Ferguson, who led 19-18 after the 16th. They followed it up with a four, which almost clinched the game. Ence, who scored a single on the two remaining heads, which left Coleman and Ferguson winners by 24-19.

One of the strongest Recreio pairs in the competition, F. V. V. Ribeiro and H. A. Alves defeated R. Edwards and R. Fitches by 28-12 on the Police green. The winners always had something in hand and won with ease.

Madame Mathieu won three titles at the French Tennis Championships which concluded at Paris over the week-end. She carried off the singles, the women's doubles (with Miss Yorke) and the mixed doubles (with Mille).

British Heavyweight Fight Postponed

TOMMY FARR NOT TO FIGHT IN ENGLAND

By Harold Lewis

London, May 17. Tommy Farr has decided to return to America in the second week in June. He will not fight in this country during his present visit. His American manager, Mr. Joe Gould, told me last night that he and Farr are interested in only one fight in England—a fight with Jack Doyle. They went to see Mr. Arthur Elvin at Wembley last Thursday night, and said Mr. Gould, on offer was then made of £5,000 for a fight with Doyle during the first week in August at Wembley Stadium.

"We are thinking over," said Gould. "We consider that fight would draw between 75,000 and 100,000 people and that the receipts would be at least £25,000." "Farr and I are going back to see the Louis-Schmeling fight in New York on June 22. We have offers for five fights over there. One is a fight with Maurice Strickland, for which Canada is bidding. Last night came a cable from Mike Jacobs offering us a return fight with Max Baer.

"From Los Angeles is a good offer for a fight with Maxie Rosenbloom, former world's light heavyweight champion; and we also have offers from Philadelphia and Chicago."

I asked Gould what he was proposing to do about the decision of the British Boxing Board of Control that the winner of the Eddie Phillips-Ben Foord fight in London on June 14 would be considered the official challenger to Farr for the British heavyweight championship.

"We are only interested in the Doyle proposition," he repeated. "On Wednesday Tommy goes before the stewards of the Board. He hasn't been told what they want to talk to him about, and I, his manager, have not been invited to go along. As far as your Board is concerned, I don't exist."

WRIGHT PERFORMS "HAT TRICK"

First Of Present Cricket Season

London, May 19. Bowlers were always on top in a keen day's cricket at Gillingham, where 20 wickets fell for 373 runs. Wright did the hat-trick for Kent, and Goddard bowled superbly for Gloucestershire, who, after 107 sent in to bat, finished the day 107 runs ahead with all their second innings wickets intact.

The experienced Charles Barnett took the honours at the start of the day and afterwards the younger men, Crapp, Gloucestershire's left-hand batsman, and Wright, Kent's slow bowler, took the honours. Wright, by dismissing Sinfield, Haynes and Cranfield with three successive balls in his 23rd over, performed the hat-trick—the first of the season. Barnett and Crapp between them were responsible for 180 of Gloucester's meagre total, and they put on 107 in the fourth wicket by delightful batting. In attempting to cut a ball that kept low, Barnett was snuffed at the wicket. He scored a chanceless 98 out of 164 in two hours 10 minutes.

Crapp took out his bat after giving a splendid display for two hours. He scored readily all round the wicket and sent the ball to the boundary 14 times. Wright took 7 for 77 on a dead pitch and at one time actually sent back four men without conceding a run.

W. R. Hammond, skippering Gloucestershire in the absence of Allen, who is indisposed, placed his faith in Goddard and Sinfield when Kent went in, and the pair never faltered on a pitch that was no faster than in the morning. Farr was the one Kent batsman to face the cleverly-flighted off-spinners with confidence.

Woolley and Ames each hit a six, and with two men out for 62 at tea Kent were not so badly placed. After the interval Goddard got to work and Kent lost their last five wickets for 26.

AUSTRALIANS CAN STILL SAVE TEST AT TRENT BRIDGE

McCabe Foils England With Magnificent Batting

BUT for Stan McCabe's magnificent batting display, where would be the Australians now? Certainly not in their present position, with every possible chance of forcing a draw unless their batting crumpled up a second time. McCabe's 232, made in the face of great odds, prevented England from taking a lead of more than 247 runs at the end of the first innings, and though this was sufficient to enable Hammond to enforce the follow-on, it was nothing like the advantage the Englishmen looked like establishing at one stage of the game. Australia's prospects of saving the match were far from bright when C. L. Badcock, the last of the acknowledged Australian batsmen in the team, played forward to Wright with the score standing at 184 for five, failed to cover the ball and was bowled. After this, not even the most optimistic Australian supporter, I am sure, would have expected them to reach 411; for apart from Barnett, a left-handed batsman, none of the remaining three, O'Reilly, McCormick and Fleetwood-Smith, could by any stretch of the imagination be labelled a batsman. But each in his own way rose to the occasion, and though none of them, other than Barnett, reached double figures, they played their part in helping McCabe raise the score to a respectable total. Australians were put in again, for England had lost the wicket (Fingleton's) for 102 runs. They are still 145 runs behind with nine wickets in hand and an English innings to follow, but in the time left for play—to-day is the last day—it is extremely doubtful whether the Englishmen will be able to won 11 and Great Britain four. Britain therefore has a lot of leeway to make up.

Three Titles

FOR many years the leading lady tennis player in France and one of the most consistent players in the world, Madame Simone Mathieu has earned a just reward by winning three titles in the French Tennis Championships just concluded in Paris. It is meet that she, a Frenchwoman, should be so successful in the national championships. Seldom brilliant, she relies on her steadiness to carry her through her matches. Her win in the final of the singles was a comfortable one, her opponent, Madame Landry, giving her little opposition. Her partners, with Miss A. M. Yorke of Great Britain is one of long standing and their success in the doubles, in view of the limited competition offered by the other contestants, was not entirely a surprise; but her victory with Mille in the mixed doubles was really a praiseworthy effort. Here they did well to beat the strong combination of Miss Nancy Wynne of Australia and Christian Bousquet of France. While it is realised that Madame Mathieu must be in great form to score so many successes, it has also to be remembered that the leading players of the United States and Great Britain were not present in Paris for the championship; they were at Wimbledon contesting the Wightman Cup. Some of the gift must, therefore, be taken off Madame Mathieu's performance accordingly.

Loveloek Says No

RUMOURS are flying around that Jack Lovelock, Olympic champion and world's holder at 1,500 metres, is contemplating a return to the track in big athletic events this summer. These rumours have no foundation. Lovelock, now a doctor with a house physician's job at St. Mary's Hospital, is far too busy to think of serious athletics.

Two days a week and every third Sunday he is on duty for twenty-four hours at a stretch. On other days he must always be within call to attend to the needs of the fifty patients in his ward. Not much room left for training here. True, Lovelock snatches odd hours to run round the track at Paddington just to keep his weight down, but the real business of hard training is out of the question.

If and when Lovelock can spare the time to run he will confine his energies to matches against school teams, a branch of coaching in which he has already done invaluable work. Broadly, where they don't understand how Lovelock can spare time for his medical career, the desire to have him as a guest runner at international meetings is as strong as ever.

The Danish Amateur Athletic Association have invited him to compete at Copenhagen in August. Two other English runners were included in the invitation; America wants him for the Princeton meeting in June; Finland would like to see him later in the year. Lovelock has had to refuse in each case.

Poor Treatment

I AM ashamed of the way the golfers from abroad are treated here during the practice days before the championship, wrote P. B. Lucas from Troon during the British amateur championship. Discontent at the arrangements is universal. British golfers abroad are, I know from experience, always given special consideration in securing practice times.

But here the American and Australian teams had to take their turn with the rest of us. The visitors should, of course, have been allotted special starting times. Instead, they have been obliged to wait sometimes an hour and a half before they can start practice. A famous international golfer said to me: "I have never seen a championship so badly handled."

McCABE HELPS AUSTRALIANS OUT OF A TIGHT CORNER IN TEST Flogs Bowling In Double Century At Notts

London, June 13.

S. J. McCabe, veteran New South Wales all-rounder and Australian vice-captain, provided all the thrills when the first test against England was resumed on the Trent Bridge ground, Nottingham to-day. Batting for most of the day and undeterred by falling wickets, he drove the bowlers off their length, and stealing the bowling from the indifferent tail, took Australia's score from two for 111, to five for 151 and then to 411 before he was dismissed.

Quicker scoring had seldom been seen before on the ground. McCabe gathered 232 in 235 minutes, and in half an hour's last wicket stand with Fleetwood-Smith, who contributed only five, knocked off 77.

Facing a deficit of 247 on the first innings, Australia was forced to follow on. The Australians soon showed they were trying to force a draw by steady batting and when stumps were drawn one wicket was down for 102, Fingleton going to a difficult catch by Hammond off Edrich for 40.

To-day's forecast was—Fair, with light northerly winds; average or less temperature. An examination of the wicket before the play opened showed signs that it would probably take a spin, although on Saturday not even Fleetwood-Smith was able to make the ball turn.

The weather was glorious with not a cloud in the sky when McCabe and Ward resumed their innings, but doubts were expressed whether the wicket would last. General opinion was that if it cracked, Australia would have a difficult task against the English spin bowlers.

England's bowlers met with instant success for Farnes was very hostile and Sinfield, Wright, Verity and Hammond all maintaining good lengths and were backed up by splendid fielding. To the overnight score of three for 138, only six had been added before McCabe lost Ward, who fell a victim to a good delivery from Farnes on the second ball of his second over. Ward made only two and four were down for 144.

Hassett almost played on the second ball, but he failed to get set and after scoring one was snapped up by Hammond off Wright at first slip.

Over the Fence
Five were down for 151 when Badcock joined McCabe, and while Badcock took no chances McCabe gave the crowd a display of brilliant driving and pulling. He lifted Farnes over the fence for six on one occasion and after bringing up 50 in 85 minutes, quickly took command of the bowling and reached his century in 135 minutes.

The partnership was beginning to have its possibilities for Australia when Hammond had an inspiration and put Wright on at the pavilion end. The move met with instant success for Badcock was in two minds in attempting a chop stroke, missed and the ball took his off stump. He had scored only nine and six were down for 194 when Barnett joined McCabe.

He immediately got his eye in and played out time until lunch when the score was six for 201. McCabe was then 105 and Barnett 20.

Farnes had two deliveries with the old ball and then with his first delivery with the new one dismissed Barnett, who sent one to Wright at cover. Barnett had batted solidly for 22 and with McCabe had added 69 in 53 minutes.

O'Reilly, who followed, did not last long, for after making nine he sent one from Farnes to Poynter at mid-on and eight were down for 316. His partnership with McCabe, while it lasted only 25 minutes, added 50 to the score.

Bowlers Lose Length
Hammond was varying his length too much and Farnes lost his earlier accuracy and direction with the result that McCabe punished him unmercifully, sending him to the pickets three times in one over. When he had scored 123 McCabe gave a chance to Edrich at square leg, but it was dropped. It was a costly mistake.

McCormick, who followed O'Reilly, was bowled by Wright for two but McCabe took most of the bowling and the pair added 18 for the wicket.

When Fleetwood-Smith joined

McCabe with nine down for 334 Australia's chances looked very dismal, but his arrival began the most amazing partnership of the match for the slow bowler, usually a none too reliable but, managed to stay in, and with McCabe doing most of the scoring the total gradually rose to the 400 mark.

McCabe was easily the hero of the desperate effort. Hitting cleverly he stole the bowling and attempted to make every stroke a boundary. After bringing up his 100 in 100 minutes he scored two fours from Wright in succession, repeated the measure in the same over and then in Wright's next over punished him for 14. In three overs McCabe took 34 from Wright.

Quick Scoring
Hammond prepared with Wright however and McCabe enjoyed it for after hitting him three times to the fence off successive balls he brought up his 200 in 215 minutes, having added 105 in 65 minutes after lunch. Verity, who had bowled without success during the innings, eventually stopped the riot of scoring. Attempting to send a loose one to the fence off the Yorkshire trundler, McCabe cocked one up to Compton at cover, and he made no mistake.

McCabe scored 232 in 235 minutes, after a glorious all-round 'wicket display which included a six and 34 fours. It was his highest test score against England, beating his 187 not out at Sydney in 1932-3.

Fleetwood-Smith, however, backed up McCabe well, for in a stone-walling exhibition at a critical period, he added five to the partnership's 77, gathered in half an hour 106, was the most successful bowler, followed by Wright with four for 153.

Facing a deficit of 247 on the first innings, Fingleton and Brown opened Australia's follow-on innings and soon had 26 on the board. No tea interval was taken.

Taking No Chances

The start of the second innings was an anti-climax to the close of the first for Brown and Fingleton were funeral like and ultra-cautious in their batting, and it became obvious that the Australians had adopted the policy of playing for a draw.

The 50 took 72 minutes to compile and Hammond, Sinfield and Wright, who took up the bowling, all struck good lengths and commanded respect.

The crowd barracked the slow batting and clapped impatiently while Fingleton removed a glove and squatted in the field, refusing to continue until the crowd became quiet. After that the spectators confined themselves to remarks during overs.

Fingleton was the first to go, being dismissed by a difficult catch by Hammond at first slip off Edrich. Fingleton, who scored 40, was very stolid and had batted for 137 minutes.

One was down for 89 when Bradman joined Brown, who had been very painstaking and took 153 minutes to reach 50.

When stumps were drawn with one down for 102, Brown had scored 51 and Bradman three.

ARSENE LUPIN RETURNS

SYNOPSIS—The $250,000 de Grisac emerald is stolen in Paris after a New York thief is fooled with a replica. Arsene Lupin, turned honest and in love with Lorraine de Grisac, is suspected of being the thief—and the thief—by Steve Emerson, ex-G-Man sent over by the insurance company to guard the jewel. Suspected by two of his old henchmen of double-crossing them, Lupin for Rene Farrant, his "honest" alias, states that he stole it and took it to Papa Monelle to be cut. Repatriating to Monelle's home, they find him murdered, and set about opening the safe.

Chapter Seven

RETREAT FROM DANGER

Farrant and Alf were intent upon their work at the safe. "Come on, start again," said Farrant. Alf's fingers explored the safe's dial delicately. "Bliss." "That's the first one... Now." "Nineteen." "All right. I think we've got it." Farrant took Alf's place at the safe. He slowly began turning the combination. Alf watched in impatient tension. "Can't you hurry, boss?" "If you'll stop your teeth chattering we'll make better time. What have you got next?" "Eleven—that's the last." "And eleven turns the trick!" Farrant pulled open the door. In plain view was an oblong leather case. Farrant opened it. The de Grisac emerald gleamed against its plush background. "We got it!" said Alf in hushed, awed tones. He went to the door and snapped his fingers. "Joel! Come on, we got it!" He returned to the desk and began to wrap the wires around the watch-like instrument while Farrant was busy wiping off all fingerprints from the safe. Joe entered from his guard post, scrutinized with quick eyes the glittering jewel which Farrant held up for his inspection. While the three men were at work on the safe, a furtive figure approached along the street which ended at Papa Monelle's cafe. Watching his opportunity, he darted across to the door leading to the fence's living quarters. The stairway was in darkness. The man began slowly to climb upward, drawing his gun. His attention was bent entirely on the room above him. Had he looked back from the doorway he would have seen a gendarme examining a parked car at the corner by aid of a flashlight. After a hasty glance up and down the street and back along the cul-de-sac, the policeman studied the darkened facade of Papa Monelle's cafe. After some hesitation, he started slowly toward it. "This is a haul, boss," said Alf. "We got to hand it to you." Farrant put the watch-like instrument in another. "Look at your shoes. Be sure you don't pick up anything."

"We've got it," said Alf in hushed, awed tones.

The three of them lifted their feet and examined their soles. Alf, standing nearest the door, suddenly stiffened to attention. One foot still raised, he uttered a warning "sh-sh!" Joe took alarm at once. "What is it?" "I heard a stair creak!" They might have been turned to stone, so immobile were they in their listening attitudes. Meanwhile, the shadowy figure ascending the stairway, was nearing the second floor landing. A metallic clicking as the door-knob began to turn slowly caused him to stop. Dimly he saw the hall door opening; then the beam of a flashlight darted about the lower hall, began to ascend the steps. Just as it swept across the lower hall, two gun reports reared in quick succession. The gendarme collapsed at the foot of the stairs. The gunman ran lightly down, jumped across the prostrate body and darted out into the street. At sound of the shots, Farrant turned off his flashlight. The momentary, startled silence was broken by a hoarse cry from Joe. "That's all I want to hear! I'm screaming!" "We've got to run for it!" Alf whispered. "Slowly," cautioned Farrant. "Less noise!" Through the stiffness came the roar of a motor being started, followed by a police whistle in front of the cafe. That, in turn, was succeeded by a muffled sound; it might have been a man's body falling against the lower hall door.

With Joe in advance, the three men descended the back stairway and looked cautiously out of the rear door. "Way seems clear," muttered Joe in tones that seemed to come from half-paralyzed vocal chords. "Soprala!" commanded Farrant. "Meet me in five minutes at the car."

Stealthily they let themselves out, one at a time, and started away in different directions. They heard the screeching of auto tires approaching the cafe down the dead-end street. It lent speed to their feet. The police car roared to the end of the cul-de-sac. Three gendarmes piled out before it stopped. Propped against the doorway of the cafe, they saw the huddled form of a comrade in uniform.

"Quick, that way!" he gasped, pointing up the street that crossed the cul-de-sac in front of Papa Monelle's. "The way that way."

Even as he spoke, an auto swerved into sight a block away, gathered speed, and shot into a thoroughfare parallel to the dead-end street. The gendarmes climbed back into their car, its motor still running, and sped after the fleeing auto, while the third dashed up the stairway to Monelle's apartment. Farrant's car swept away from the scene with Joe at the wheel. At Farrant's order, Alf had climbed into the trunk rack and shut the trap-door. Farrant was quickly divesting himself of the groom's outfit. He hid the clothes under the seat so that when the gendarmes' car overtook him, he was to all appearance a well-dressed civilian being driven by a chauffeur. He bade Joe stop the car and calmly awaited the two police who jumped from their own auto

Chapter Eight

THE PREFECT IS SUSPICIOUS

Le Marchand's desk was littered with reports, copies of passports and passport photographs when Steve Emerson entered for a report on the progress of the investigation. He had entrusted to the French private detective. "What luck?" he asked. "The bullet was fired from a Rossi Superieur. The one from Farrant's target resembles the one from New York. But the tests are not yet conclusive."

"I'll be along and even they will be. Break out the passports." "Here's a copy of Farrant's for Italy." Emerson inspected it briefly, frowning in disappointment. "That's the end of that trail. But what about Lupin's aliases?" "I traced them all. Not one was used. But here's something interesting." He passed over another passport. Steven read the name aloud: "The Marquis de Lourday. Who is he?" "That's what's interesting. I looked him up in De Broit. There's no such title—no such person."

"The bullet was fired from a Rossi Superieur."

"Then he's a fake name," said Farrant. "He called from Germany on the Graf Zeppelin, for New York." "Well, the time this passport arrived in New York the ninth." "And the Burgundia docked the same day. . . . Well, anything else?" "He returned to Europe by ship. The Coronie. Left New York on the eleventh." "Then he's in New York!" Steve became excited. "He was there for two days—the right two days! Let me see that again." He took Marquis de Lourday's passport, studied the photo on it with that on Farrant's passport for the same day. . . . Well, anything else?" "He returned to Europe by ship. The Coronie. Left New York on the eleventh." "Then he's in New York!" Steve became excited. "He was there for two days—the right two days! Let me see that again." He took Marquis de Lourday's passport, studied the photo on it with that on Farrant's passport for the same day. . . . Well, anything else?"

"Bring it here." As Le Marchand hastened to obey, Steve placed the two passport photos side by side and studied them. That of the Marquis showed a man with a beard trimmed very neatly in the Parisian fashion. Steve dipped a brush in the solution and painted over the Marquis's face took on an expression of amazement as the beard dissolved and disappeared from the face of Rene Farrant! "Steve was exultant. 'Go the Marquis de Lourday also raises pigs!'" "Does he?" asked the puzzled investigator. "An American slang for omnivore," explained Steve, picking up his hat and making a bee-line for the door. "Martel, Prefect of Police, seated at his desk, was thoughtfully watching Georges Bouchet who stormed about, gesticulating wildly. "My cousin, the Count, is too easy-going. But I—I demand action. The insurance has not been paid. The emerald has disappeared—under the noses of four detectives. It's preposterous. I give you forty-eight hours to produce something concrete, or I shall see that the people learn how inefficient their police are." Bouchet bowed stiffly. "Gentlemen, good day."

"Good-bye, M. Bouchet," responded the Prefect dryly. "And thank you for your help." Duval accompanied Bouchet to the door, opened for him and after their collector had gone, beckoned Detective Valois who was waiting in an ante-chamber. Valois approached his chief, a sheepish look on his face. "You lost Emerson again last night?" growled the Prefect. "Yes, sir."

"That's all. You may go." Valois made no attempt to justify himself—simply disappeared from the office. The Prefect issued an order: "Duval! Assign Vigneau and Bonet to Emerson. He won't find them so easy. Wait. Pavloff is in court this morning, and he will discharge insufficient evidence. Have two dependable men follow Pavloff and report every place he goes."

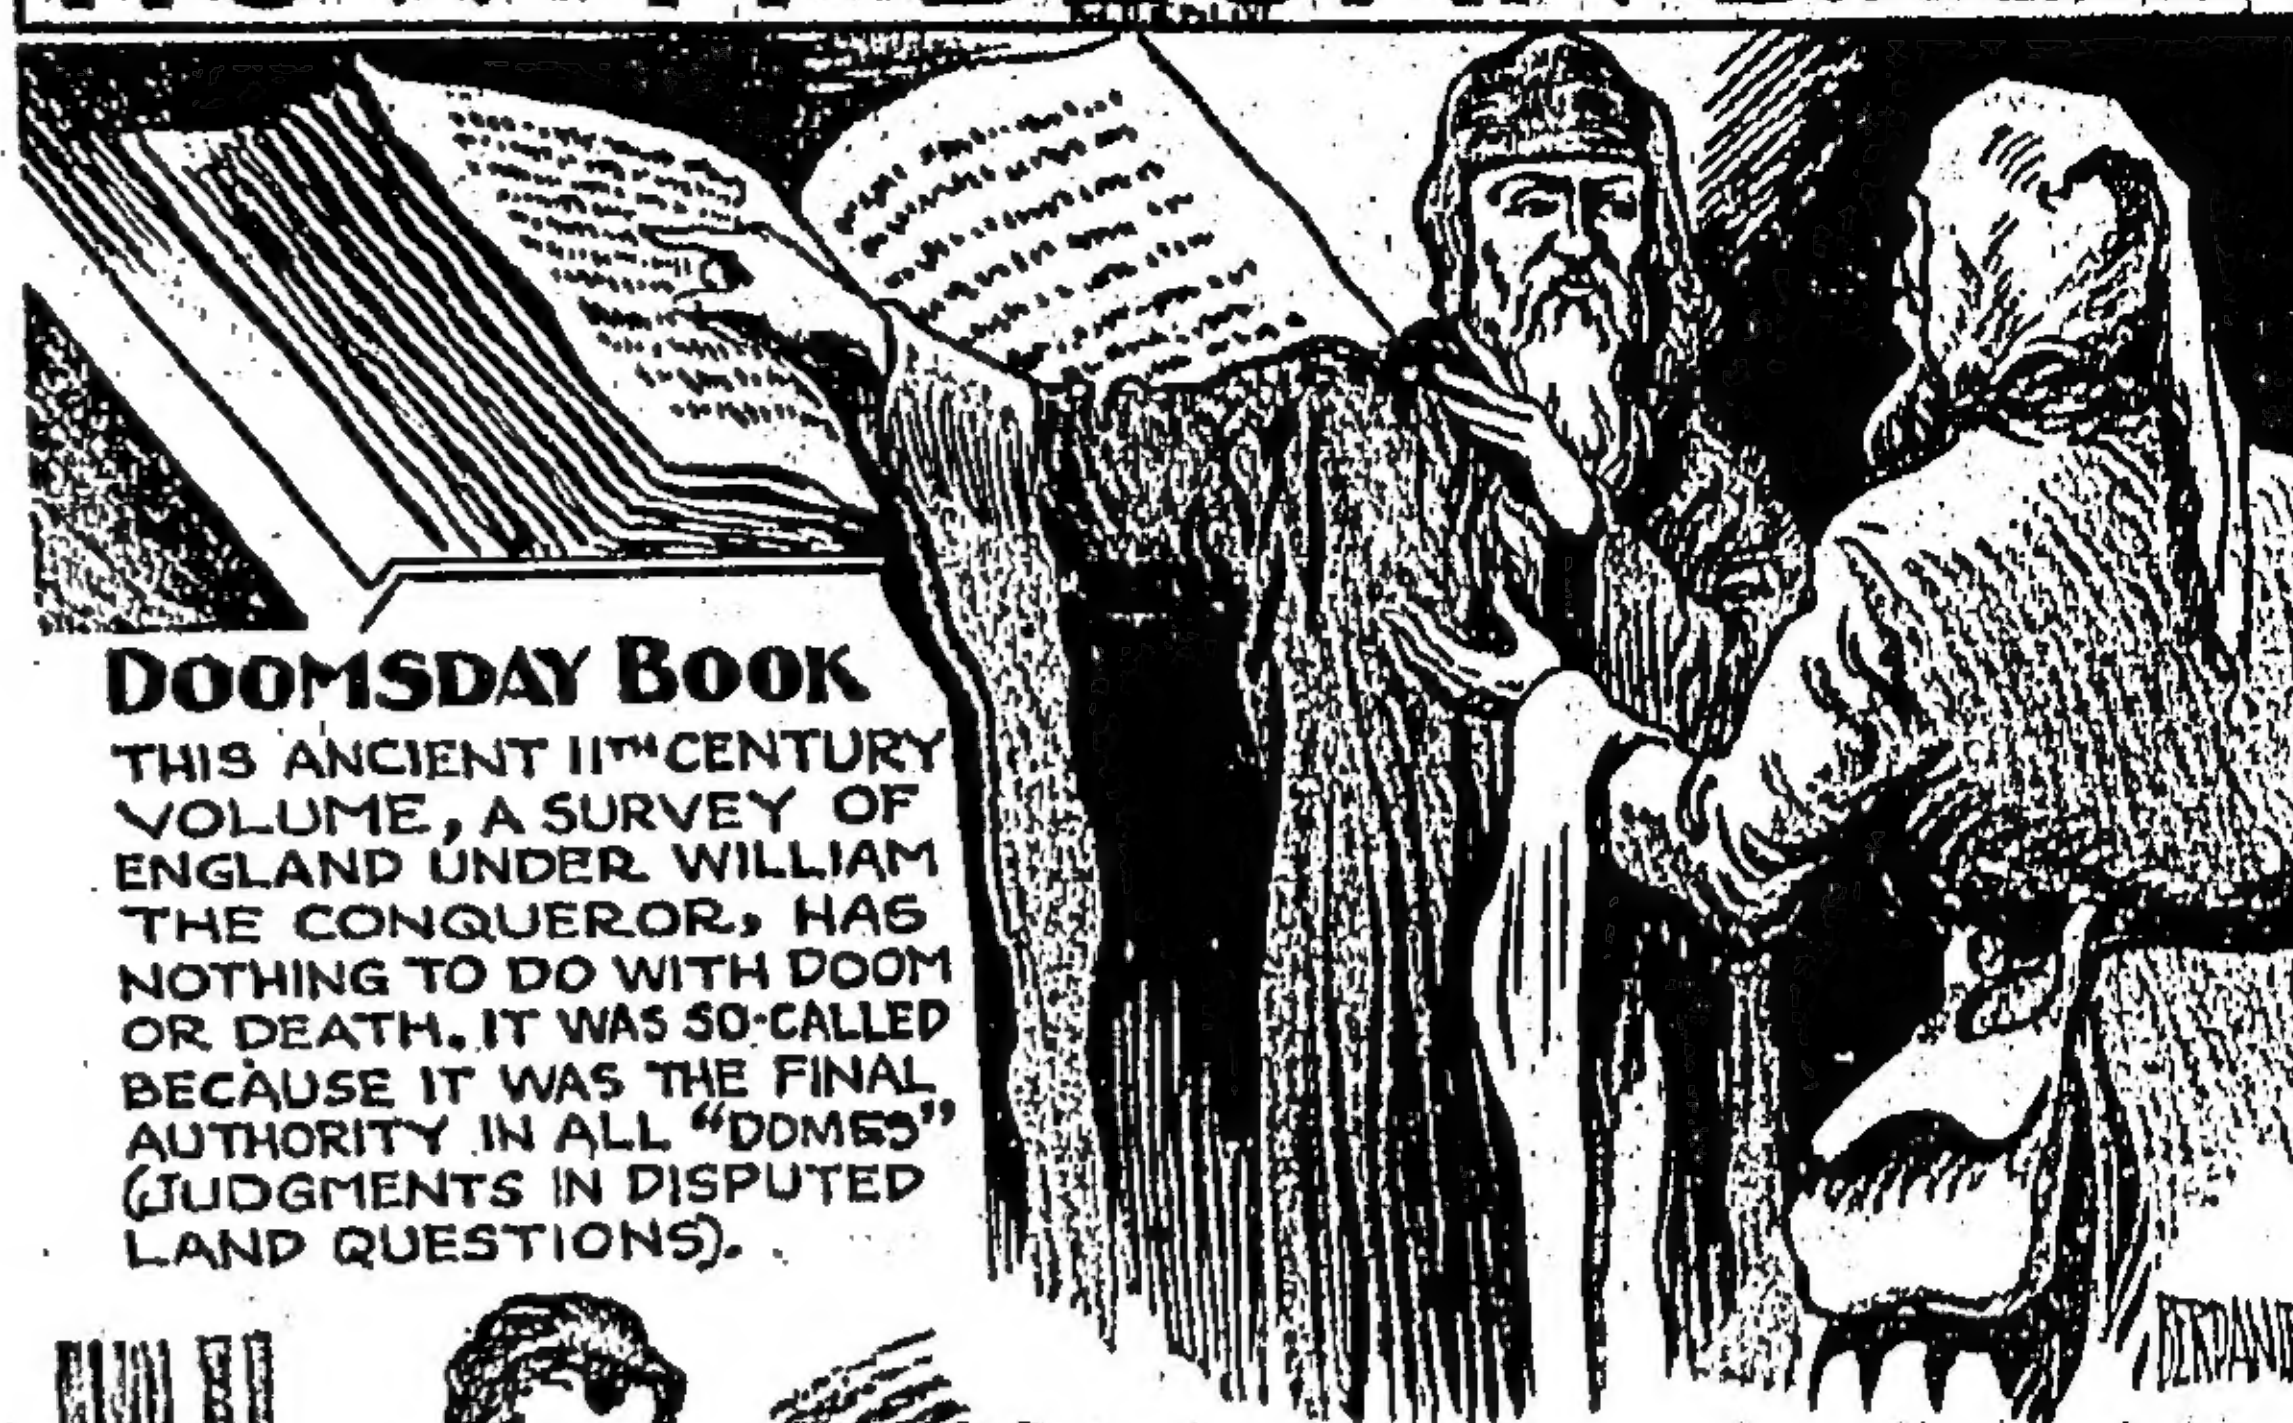

Duval joined in the Prefect's smug smile. "Good idea. He'll probably contact Lupin."

"Perhaps one of Lupin's accomplices." The Prefect's prognostication was justified. Ivan Pavloff was discharged in police court. As he emerged from the building he took a deep breath of air, buttoned his coat and glanced sharply up and down the street. He saw a burly man wearing a slouch hat by a lamp post on the opposite side of the street, reading a newspaper. Pavloff sauntered slowly down the steps, but a short distance away stopped in front of a man's furnishings store. In one corner of the window was a pillar about ten inches square, with mirrors on all four sides. As he adjusted his tie, he saw a reflection of the image of the burly man in the slouch hat. He was still reading his paper. Pavloff smiled fleetingly, walked quickly around the corner and approached a taxi parked at the curb. He opened the door and stepped inside.

"Hotel Embassy," he said. "And drive slowly. I don't like fast driving." The burly man in the slouch hat came quickly to attention as Pavloff disappeared around the corner. He was joined by a thin man wearing a derby. Together they started in the direction Pavloff had taken. Pavloff left the taxi at the Embassy Hotel and went up to the fourth floor and rapped softly on

Bobby Breen's HARMONICA LESSONS

Like every real American boy, Bobby Breen, RKO Radio Pictures' young radio, stage and screen star, enjoys playing Harmonica Music. How he learned to play is explained in a series of six articles especially written for the boy and girl readers of this newspaper. This is the first article—watch for the others.

By BOBBY BREEN

Playing harmonica music is real imagine that some day I'll be good fun, as thousands and thousands of enough to play with a top-notch boys and girls everywhere well hand myself.

know. While I like singing best of all, I get a real thrill out of playing my harmonica. It's like carrying your own band around with you! (Imagine carrying a real band in your pocket!) A regulation harmonica is small, and can be carried very easily wherever you go. At camp, on a hike, at home, at parties, or at school, the harmonica is a dandy little pal. You can have loads of fun, even if you are not an expert player.

I guess you boys and girls also envy the really good professional players when you hear them on the radio. I know I do, and like to used to envy the fellows who could play those snappy tunes and thought it must be difficult to learn.

but, it's really very simple—as easy as one-two-three. If you can whistle a tune, you can learn to play harmonica, and once you get the knack of it, it's as easy as eating ice cream.

You can learn to play without having to read a single note of music, and if you can count from one to ten you can start playing a song almost right off. For beginners, a Key of "C" harmonica is best, because it's easiest to play.

First, hold your harmonica between the thumb and forefingers of the left hand, as shown in the picture. The low notes, or bass notes, should be on the left; high notes on the right. Most harmonicas have numbers from 1 to 10 stamped on the cover plate over each reed hole on the instrument. Next, BLOW and DRAW through the harmonica a few times just to get acquainted with the sound of it. Even before we learn to play the scale, suppose we try a song "in numbers."

Everybody knows the tune of "America," so it should not be difficult to judge how long to hold each note. Push your lips like you were in Hole No. 4. Again BLOW 4—now DRAW 4 (breathe in)—DRAW 3—BLOW 4—DRAW 4—and we have the first line of the song, "My Country 'Tis of Thee." Easy?

Below is the whole song to practice until our next lesson. "B"—means BLOW—"D" means DRAW.

In other lessons I will tell you how I learned to play the musical scale, about rhythm and trick effects—and of course, more songs.

Save these lessons for your scrap book.

YANGTSE FIGHTING SEVERE

Hankow, June 14.
Japanese troops landed yesterday morning at Wuchihshin and Chienchiungkai, on the south bank of the Yangtse, and at Chinyangho, on the north bank, under cover of a terrific bombardment from Japanese warships, according to an urgent telephone message received here from Ankang this morning.

The Japanese who landed at Chienchiungkai were driven back to their ships after a vigorous engagement, but those who landed at Wuchihshin were still ashore, though they had been forced to retreat down the Yangtse, the Chinese claim.

Severe fighting is progressing on the northern bank of the Yangtse at Chinyangho.

The Chinese spokesman here added that severe fighting was also progressing at Kweichih, on the south bank of the Yangtse, where the Japanese landed from transports, under cover of a severe naval bombardment, and the warfare here was apparently assuming serious proportions. —Reuter

Planes Active Near Macao

Macao, June 13.
Japanese planes dropped three bombs this morning, the explosions of which were heard in Macao, at a point some miles to the west of this Colony, but so far no information has been received with regard to the locality bombed.

This is the first activity by the Japanese in these parts for many days; the large concentrations of Japanese warships that were observed some time ago, and which melted away, are still absent, though there are a few small ships in the vicinity of San Chao Island. It is believed that the planes that were active this morning came from these vessels. —Our Own Correspondent.

Chinese Try To Show Film Of Alleged Opium Traffic

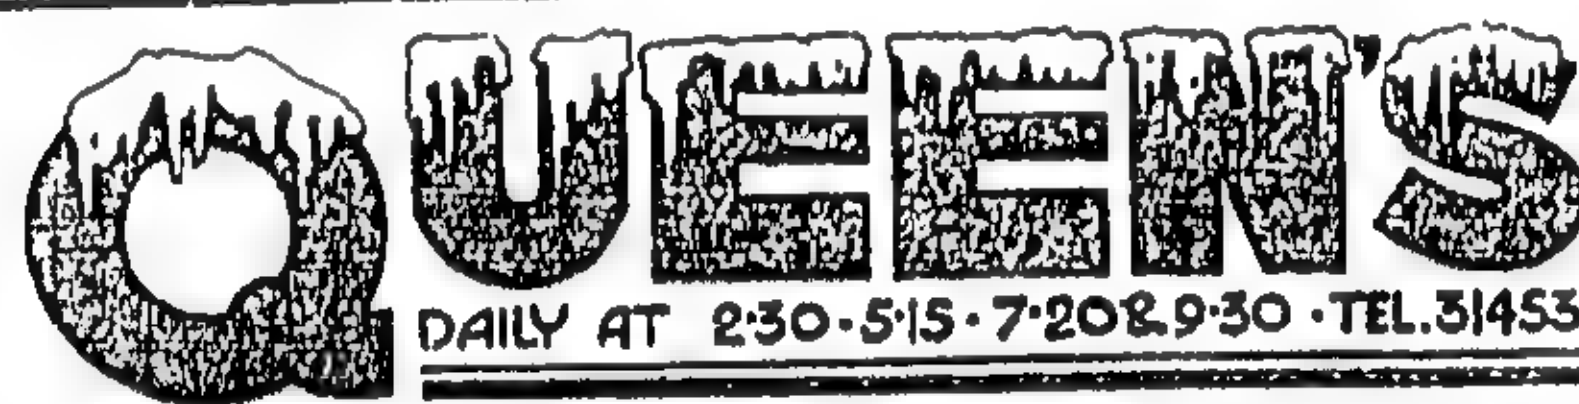

Geneva, June 13.
Efforts by the Chinese delegate to the meeting of the Opium Committee of the League of Nations to show a film purporting to reveal methods employed by the Japanese in distributing opium throughout the occupied regions of China were frustrated to-day when the Japanese delegate threatened to resign from the Committee.

A heated exchange of words took place between Dr. Hoo, the permanent Chinese delegate and Mr. Amau, the Japanese delegate.

Dr. Hoo alleged that his film would show that the Japanese were attempting to demoralise Chinese resistance through the use of opium. Violently protesting, Mr. Amau pointed out that Japan's sincere desire to co-operate in curbing the use of opium throughout the world was evidenced by the fact that she had co-operated on the Opium Committee for 14 years. Through her measures in Manchukuo, Japan had ably demonstrated her ability to combat opium traffic.

Opium traffickers had fled from Manchukuo to Peiping because they knew they could carry on unrestricted traffic in the drug under Chinese control there, he charged.

Dr. Hoo declared that China's six year plan for suppressing opium was being carried on despite the war with Japan, and of the seven Chinese provinces which were still authorised to produce opium to a limited extent, two had already voluntarily ceased cultivating the opium poppy. —Trans-Ocean.

India's reaction to the Japanese bombing of Canton is revealed in a cable received in Hongkong by Mr. Amritlal D. Sheth, representative of the vernacular newspaper, Janmabhoomi, which reads:

The funeral took place yesterday afternoon at the Protestant Cemetery. Donald was the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Clemo. Complications occurred, however, and the child was rushed to the French Hospital, but failed to respond to treatment.

JAPANESE ARMY PERISHES IN FLOOD

HUGE LOSS OF TANKS AND GUNS

5,000 Men Wiped Out Near Paisha

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telephone. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, June 14, 10.45 a.m.)

Hankow, June 14.
The Japanese have suffered one of their most serious defeats of the China campaign—and the Yellow River, China's Sorrow as it has been known for so long, is responsible.

Chinese military documents, the United Press learns exclusively, show that Kaifeng City is at present surrounded by water twenty feet deep. The basin of the city itself is completely submerged.

This rush of water has caused an uncomputable loss to the Japanese army. All of the invaders' heavy weapons, including 250 guns, 80 tanks and 100 armoured cars, which could not be withdrawn, are submerged.

The total area inundated was occupied by 70,000 Japanese troops. How many are drowned is unknown, but in one instance a unit of 5,000 men was completely wiped out, being either drowned or slain by the Chinese in the vicinity of Paisha, Friday.—United Press.

Chengchow, June 14.
The flood situation in Honan has been further aggravated through the widening of the breaches by Japanese aerial and artillery bombardment. Volumes of water are continually pouring through the breaches, widening the flooded areas hourly.
The situation is worst in the low districts north of Chungmow where the water is approximately 10 feet high. Thousands of refugees are in danger of being drowned.
Because of the deluge, the major part of the Japanese garrison in Chungmow will be withdrawn to Kaifeng, it is learned.—Central News.
Later reports indicate that a retreat to Kaifeng is impossible. The flood has apparently isolated the troops at Chengchow.

Who Is To Blame?

Hankow, June 13.
No-one will ever know who caused the breaches in the Yellow River dykes.
The Chinese claim that Japanese artillery was responsible.
The Japanese claim that the Chinese deliberately forced farmers, at the point of the bayonet, to make the breaches in order to impede the advance of the Japanese forces on Chengchow.
Whoever is responsible has released an all-devouring giant who is threatening to consume Japanese and Chinese alike.
The sand-laden waters of China's Sorrow are now pouring through the (Continued on Page 7.)

SEEK TO CUT VITAL RAIL LINE

Japanese Close To Objective

Hankow, June 13.
Japanese detachments are threatening the Peiping-Hankow Railway near Sincing, some miles south of the Lunghai Railway junction at Chengchow, where 50,000 flood refugees, in addition to thousands of refugees from Kaifeng and other war-torn areas, are awaiting transportation southwards.
A strong Japanese detachment suddenly appeared near Sincing on Sunday and the Chinese forces there are now endeavouring to prevent it from straddling the railway line, an accomplishment that would make Chengchow a second Hsuehchow.
Simultaneously with this fighting in the northern area, Japanese forces from Yushih, as reported, are attacking Yuchuan, while another Japanese column from Luyi is attacking Kwaiyuan, in the vicinity of Yencheng.—Reuter.

Relaxation In Prague

Czech Government Feels Confidence

Prague, June 13.
There was a general feeling of relaxation to-day following the strain of the elections.
The Political sub-Committee of the Council met this morning and heard the report on the negotiations between the Premier, Dr. Milan Hozda and the Sudeten leader, Herr Konrad Henlein.
Talks between the Czech and Sudeten leaders will be resumed tomorrow, but they are likely to be protracted owing to the wide field to be covered.
The results of the elections strengthen the claim of Herr Henlein that he is speaking for the vast majority of Sudeten Germans, but the Czech Government also feels encouraged by the results, which show that it enjoys increased support throughout the country.—Reuter Special.

I.G.P. Explains Difficulties With Hawkers

Little Fines Don't Stop Practice

The hawk problem was further commented upon by Mr. H. B. Butters at the Central Magistracy this morning, when the Commissioner of Police, the Hon. Mr. T. H. King, himself appeared in Court.
Mr. Butters reported what he had already said in Court yesterday, and said that he was not criticising the police, but rather the futility of the present system of dealing with unlicensed hawkers. Mr. Butters remarked that deserving cases recommended for licences by the Court Council, and that most of the hawkers on small ball did not appear in Court and had their ball estrated. These persons were later found to be continuing hawking.
Mr. King remarked that his Worship had considerably diminished the cutting of wild tree wood in the Colony by imposing heavy sentences on the offenders.
His Worship replied that he could not deal with hawkers in the same way without filling Stanley goal to overflowing.
Mr. King said he wished to point out that the police were not waging a campaign against hawkers, but it did seem as if something had to be done about the hawking problem. He added that he would consider the use of fingerprints in certain areas of the Colony, and he would also consider the whole problem further.

Germans Try To Avoid Default

Berlin, June 13.
Although the precise terms of the German memorandum regarding the Austrian loans are not ascertainable here, it is understood that the memorandum opens the way to further negotiations.
There is some reason to believe that the German Government will eventually make an offer whereby the required number of Reichsmarks for Austrian service loans will be paid into a separate account, to be transferred to the banks concerned as foreign exchange becomes available.
It is believed that the German authorities may propose an alteration to the terms of the International loans to Austria in view of the improvement of Germany's foreign trade.
It is believed that Germany is anxious to avoid, if possible, the stigma of default, but at the same time desires to impress upon creditors that German tax-payers should not be expected to pay for service loans raised largely to defeat the Anschluss.—Reuter Special.

THESE PITIFUL HOMELESS refugees are fleeing from the Japanese advance near Chengchow. Thousands more are now in frantic retreat from the even worse menace from the Yellow River's flood, for the dykes are breached and a vast weight of water is pouring down upon the unprotected plains. Flood and famine, added to the horror of war, are creating for a huge area's population conditions rarely paralleled even in that country of repeated tragedies.

Missing Woman Probably Still In Hsuehchow

Shanghai, June 13.
It is learned that Miss Iris Wilkinson, the New Zealand Journalist who has been missing since before the fall of Hsuehchow, was last seen alive by a Chinese correspondent at Hsuehchow on May 15. This was on the eve of the Japanese entry into the city.
Miss Wilkinson was then staying at the American Presbyterian Mission with Mrs. Grier.
Correspondents who are now in Shanghai believe that Miss Wilkinson is still in Hsuehchow. It would be impossible for her to leave the city because all communications are still interrupted.—Reuter Special.

CONSTABLE FIGHTING SENTENCE

Contradicts Himself In Evidence

That he was nowhere near the vicinity of Centre Street on the morning of April 11, and had not spoken to the Indian constable, B443, who was on duty there, was the defence put forward by Shou Hsueh-chi, 50, a Shanghai police constable attached to the Anti-Piracy Guards, at the continued hearing of an appeal brought by him against sentence before the Acting Chief Justice, Mr. Justice R. E. Lindell, at the Supreme Court this morning. Appellant was convicted of the possession of 96 bottles of dutiable Chinese wine by Mr. H. R. Butters at the Central Magistracy on May 17, when he was fined $200.
The Assistant Crown Solicitor, Mr. M. Abbott, appeared for the respondent, Indian constable B443, Rutkin Din, while Mr. F. H. Losby represented the appellant.
Appellant entered the witness box this morning, and said that he was one of six Shanghai constables serving as Anti-Piracy guard under a Russian sergeant on board the steamer Kwangtung, which plied between the Colony and northern Chinese ports. The ship arrived in Hongkong on the morning of April 11, lying up about 8 a.m. and appellant went ashore soon after. He proceeded to Police Headquarters and drew his pay. Later, he went back to the ship, proceeding by way of Jardine's wharf, where he boarded a sampan. Appellant was carrying three rifles, and arrived at the wharf about noon. (Continued on Page 7.)

Quadruplets Born To Englishwoman

Father Unemployed Liverpool Carter

London, June 13.
Quadruplets—three girls and a boy—were born to-day in Wilton Public Hospital to Mrs. Esther Taylor, small, fair-haired, 29-year-old wife of an unemployed Liverpool carter.
The mother and four children are doing quite well, and will be able to leave shortly for their home in Fugate Street, Kirkdale.
The four babies were wrapped in cotton wool as soon as they were born, and are now in an incubator, where a temperature of 98 degrees is constantly maintained.
They are being fed on the white of eggs, and have been given occasional drops of brandy.
Specialists, doctors and nurses who attended the births were on duty as for a major operation. X-Ray photographs of the mother were frequently taken—the first four weeks ago—and the pre-natal progress of the infants was constantly studied.
Birth of the quadruplets has cost Liverpool rate-payers many hundreds of pounds, as Mr. Taylor, an out-of-work carter, cannot possibly afford the amount. But Liverpool is happy to be the home of England's latest thriving quads.
Mrs. Taylor is already the mother of four bonnie children.—Reuter Special.

31 Divisions Of Japanese For Invasion

Hankow, June 14.
Although the Japanese claim to have only fifteen fighting divisions of troops in China, a Chinese Government spokesman declared to-day that the Chinese authorities have proof "from the diaries captured with Japanese soldiers and officers." The despatch adds that detachments bled in the possession of the Chinese bear out the first contention. Actually the Japanese are using 31 divisions in China.—Reuter.

Insurgents Continue To Shatter Opposition

Bilbao, June 14.

A critical predicament in which we find ourselves can no longer be denied, declared the President of the Republican Spanish Government, Senor Azana, yesterday in a radio address to the army and civil population.

"We cannot conceal the fact that the advance of the enemy is continuing at a rapid pace. It is therefore absolutely necessary that the soldiers remain at the front and resolve to make even a supreme sacrifice in order to stop the progress of the enemy."

ACCUSES JAPAN OF SPREADING NARCOTICS

Huge Consignment For Army

Geneva, June 13.
Mr. Stuart J. Fuller, Assistant Chief of the Far Eastern Division of the U. S. Department of State, told the Opium Advisory Committee of the League of Nations to-day that Japan was undoubtedly fostering the spread of opium traffic in China and Manchuria.
"Illicit opium traffic is flourishing in these regions of China now under Japanese control," he declared.
Mr. Fuller revealed that 1,433 pounds of heroin had been exported from the United States from the Japanese Consulate at Tientsin in a single consignment from one of several narcotic gangs operating in that area.
The narcotic trade was sweeping through Harbin, Mukden, Peiping and Tientsin, Mr. Fuller said.
"Four hundred and sixty thousand pounds of opium from Iran (Persia) have been consigned to the Japanese army," Mr. Fuller alleged. "I have been informed that the sale and delivery of this vast consignment will be made under the supervision of the Japanese army, to those parts of Central China occupied by the Japanese army."
The American delegate demanded that the Committee request an immediate explanation from Japan of the uses to which this opium will be put.—United Press.

"Valencia is in a great danger," he went on to declare. "Everyone must do his bit, men, women, old people and children. All must preserve confidence, otherwise we shall face a certain collapse and defeat."
Following the broadcast, Valencia's police received orders to prevent any demonstrations or assemblies and armed patrols were set up in all principal streets of the city.—Trans-Ocean.

Fishing Fleet Sails For Kamchatka

Tokyo, June 14.
Official announcements state that over 20,000 Japanese fishermen are sailing from Hokkaido in Hokkaido for Kamchatka, many having left already, to engage in the crab and salmon fishing industry.
The Japanese government's question of their passport visas through negotiations between the Soviet Union and Japan made their departure possible though it is later than usual.

Another serious trouble, however, remains, according to a statement from a spokesman of the Foreign Office.
It is pointed out that two depot ships have hitherto been sent every year, one to the eastern coast and the other to the western coast of Kamchatka to establish liaison between the various fishing grounds, to supply any provisions or other requirements, to which the Soviet authorities have raised no objections throughout the past ten years.
This year, however, the Soviet authorities have so far not issued the necessary passports in respect of the depot ship Koryu Maru, which was assigned to the eastern coast of Kamchatka.

According to the official announcement, the Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Kensuke Horinouchi, on Monday afternoon again drew the attention of the Soviet Charge d'Affaires, Mr. Constantin Smetanin, to the urgency of this matter and pressed him to issue the necessary visas without delay in view of the rapid approach of the fishing season.—Domest.

PIRATES REPORTED ABOARD TILAWA

Destroyer And Plane Rush To Answer False Alarm

A report that the B.I. liner, Tilawa, well known in Hongkong, was pirated when about 200 miles north-west of Singapore, appeared in a recent issue of the Straits Times.

However, after a British-destroyer and a flying-boat had been despatched to the rescue from Singapore, the report was found to be false, and the naval vessel and flying-boat were recalled.

The report that the Tilawa was in the hands of pirates reached Singapore on the morning of June 3, and H.M.S. Thetis and a Singapore Short-hauling-boat from No. 203 Squadron, Seletar, left immediately to locate the ship.

On receipt of further advice shortly before 3 p.m. that the report was incorrect, the destroyer and flying-boat were recalled before either had reached the steamer.

The Tilawa, which is a 10,000-ton liner owned by the British India Line, left Singapore for Hongkong on Thursday June 2.

In addition to a large number of passengers, mainly travelling deck, the liner was believed to be carrying bullion.

The report was surprising because at the time the message was received, the Tilawa would have been near the Anambas, a group of islands far removed from the reported piracy zone, a stretch of the China Sea extending from Cape St. James, in French Indo-China, up the China Coast.

H.M.S. Thetis arrived from England only on May 31, and is due to continue her voyage to Hongkong at once.

She is a 950-ton destroyer capable of 36 knots. Her main armament comprises three 4-inch guns.

Lieut-Commander R. C. White is in command.

S'hai Street As Narcotic Centre In H.K.

POLICE ROUND-UP

The crowded areas of Shanghai Street in the past five months have been one of the centres of activities of Revenue Officers in search of heroin and opium traffickers.

Raiders carried out in this area have seldom proved fruitless, and the cases taken before the Kowloon Police Court Magistrate have nearly all been considered serious ones, necessitating heavy sentences.

Last week, Revenue Officer Warden raided No. 623 Shanghai Street and arrested a man named Lau Loy, 25, for unlawful possession of 581 heroin pills.

Charged with possession of the drug before Mr. K. M. A. Barnett at the Kowloon Magistrate's court, Lau was sentenced to 12 months' hard labour and further fined $250 or another three months' hard labour. Before passing sentence, Mr. Barnett asked the defendant if he knew that the pills killed people, and that he would be shot if he was arrested with them in other parts of China.

"I have to find some way to support myself," defendant pleaded in reply.

8,176 PILLS SEIZED
Lau Fuk-sau, 25, was sentenced by Mr. Q. A. A. Macdonald to a year in gaol for the possession of 8,176 heroin pills at 295 Shanghai Street, on June 6.

Revenue Officer E. T. Warden said he had raided the place about 9.30 p.m. and found the pills in a locked drawer.

"The place is definitely a dealers' depot," Revenue Officer Warden said.

NAVAL PLANE ON MERCY FLIGHT

Brings Urgent Case To Colony For Operation

Night Landing In Harbour

Catapulted from the deck of H.M.S. Dorsetshire with a seaman with acute appendicitis strapped in, the rear cockpit, a Fleet Air Arm seaplane roared to and fro for 45 minutes above Hongkong last night, waiting until lighting facilities could be provided for it to land in the harbour.

Adding another chapter to the front-page adventures, Ordinary Seaman James O'Shea developed appendicitis aboard the warship as it was steaming through the China Sea on exercises.

The seaman was examined by Surgeon Cmdr. Crawford, who was a witness last week in the Dorsetshire murder case at the Central Magistrate's court, and it was decided that he should be sent immediately to the Royal Naval Hospital in Hongkong for an operation.

Brief radio messages were flushed to the Commodore in Hongkong, and the seaplane was catapulted from H.M.S. Dorsetshire, which was some distance at sea, at about 10 p.m.

Meanwhile, in Hongkong, arrangements were rushed at the Naval Dockyards to provide landing lights for the seaplane which roared to and fro above the harbour until the arrangements were completed.

Searchlights were turned on the harbour from H.M.S. Enterprise and from the Dockyard Wall and a perfect landing was made by the pilot.

The work of transferring the sick man from the seaplane to a launch occupied only a few minutes and he was immediately rushed to the Royal Hospital, where surgeons were awaiting his arrival.

SUCCESSFUL OPERATION

Following a thorough examination of O'Shea after he was admitted to hospital, it was decided to defer the operation until this morning.

The anaesthetic was administered at 9 a.m. and the operation was successfully performed shortly afterwards. O'Shea came out of the anaesthetic at 11 a.m. and at 12.30 p.m. was reported to be "progressing satisfactorily."

Renovated German Ship For Hongkong

Completely re-built in the Weser Dockyards at Bremen, the North German Lloyd motor vessel Coburg will arrive in Hongkong on June 21 on her maiden voyage to the Far East.

She is to be placed in service between Hamburg and Yokohama, and will complete the run between the two ports in 36 days. The vessel left Hamburg on May 21.

As a result of its reconstruction, the Coburg is now 20 feet longer, and tonnage has been increased from 7,256 to 7,400 tons. Machinery has been brought up-to-date by the installation of two new motors, giving an increase in speed from 13½ to 16 knots. Accommodation for the crew of 56 has also been improved.

LOCAL SHOWERS ARE PROMISED TO-DAY

Another rainless 24 hours has left Hongkong with a total rainfall for the year which is 7.46 inches below the average, namely, 22.45 inches as compared with 29.91 inches.

Yesterday's maximum temperature was 89, and the minimum last night was 82. This morning at 10 o'clock, 85 degrees was registered, with humidity at 76 per cent.

The Royal Observatory weather report, issued at 10 a.m., stated that pressure is low over China generally, and a depression is approaching Shanghai from the westward.

Local forecast: Is—South and south-west winds, moderate to fresh; fair generally, with local showers.

MERCILESSLY BEATS CHILD, FINED $100

Charged before Mr. H.R. Butters at the Central Magistrate's court this morning with ill-treating a girl child named Leung Mui, 9 years old, Au Hing, 27, a married woman, was fined $100 or two months' imprisonment.

Inspector H. W. Fraser prosecuted, and said that as a result of a report made to the anti-maltreat society, he went to No. 108 Queen's Road West and discovered the child who had been badly beaten all over the body with a feather duster.

Multiple bruises had been found and the excuse given for the beating was that the child had stolen some money from a drawer.

The girl had been sold in the country when four years old for $30 to the defendant, who claimed her as her adopted daughter.

RESISTED POLICE, GOES TO GAOL

Eagerness to rid his friend of the "unwelcome attentions of the majesty of the law," in the shape of Police Constable Chau Sul-ting, has given a 25-year-old street sleeper, Lam So-ting, three months' free board and lodging.

He was sentenced to this period in Stanley Prison this morning by Mr. W. J. Lockhart Smith, when he was brought before the Central Magistrate on a charge of obstruction.

Following a street fight near Pottinger Street, Chau Sul-ting held on to the constable as he was endeavouring to arrest one of the combatants. So the constable arrested Chau instead.

BRITAIN STEERING CAREFUL COURSE

No Spectacular Action Over Bombing Attacks

London, June 13.

Mr. Neville Chamberlain, the Prime Minister, will make a statement in the House of Commons to-morrow on the bombing of British ships in Spanish Government ports, in reply to a question from the Labour leader, Mr. Clement R. Attlee.

The statement is not likely to be long and rumours of spectacular British action may be discounted.

The position is difficult, for the Government must consider the non-intervention policy on the one hand and the policy of appeasement of Europe on the other, and desires to avoid anything which might damage what has already been accomplished.

Mr. Chamberlain returned to London to-day and received the American Ambassador, Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, Lord Halifax and Sir Kingsley Wood separately.

The Cabinet is not expected to meet until Wednesday, though there will be informal contacts between ministers to-morrow.

Mr. Malcolm MacDonald will open the debate in the House of Commons with a general review of the Colonial situation. It is doubtful whether Mr. Attlee will move adjournment to discuss the bombings in Spain, as Labour is anxious to deal with the disturbance in Jamaica and the difficulties in Palestine.—Reuter.

ANOTHER DEFENCE LOAN OUT

£209,000,000 Total Of Funds Needed Since 1936

London, June 13. Reuter learns that the lists for a £209,000,000 Defence Loan will open and close on Wednesday.

The loan will be at 3 per cent, and will be issued at £98. It will be redeemable between 1954 and 1959.

This is part of the borrowing programme announced last year.

Including the £100,000,000 raised by the Defence Loan of last year, the total money borrowed for defence since 1936, with last year's budget surplus of £29,000,000 reaches the staggering sum of £209,000,000, or approximately £5 per capita of the total population of the United Kingdom.

It is estimated that this total, which includes the present projected loan, will cover defence expenditure from borrowed money for about a year.—Reuter.

U.S. Move To End Bombing Of Civilians

Denunciation Of Japan Goes Into Records

Washington, June 13. Condemnation of the Japanese bombing of Canton by the Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull, will be placed on the Imperishable Congressional Records as the result of a move by Senator Key Pittman. Senator Pittman has introduced a resolution in the Senate seeking a Congressional Vote of Confidence on the Secretary of State's denunciation.

The mere fact that the resolution has been introduced to Congress assures that it will be published in the Congressional Record. But Senator Pittman's resolution goes further than that. It suggests that the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate should study the whole question of Japanese bombings of Canton, and should determine what action is possible to halt the practice of bombing open towns.

Senator Pittman, in introducing the resolution, praised President Roosevelt's policy respecting the indiscriminate bombing of civilians in China and Spain.

"Thousands of defenceless men, women and children are being ruthlessly bombed, killed and wounded in these affairs," he declared.—United Press.

Fog Aided Japanese in Surprise Anking Attack

SWIFT SERIES OF BLOWS CAUSES FALL OF KEY POSITION

Landing Effected Under Terrific Barrage

Shanghai, June 3.

The fall of Anking, capital of Anhwei province, and the second provincial capital to fall into Japanese hands within a fortnight, has now been definitely established.

Anking has long been regarded as the "Key to Hankow," despite the fact that it is 190 miles from the latter city.

The occupation was completed at 11 p.m. on Sunday by Japanese troops who landed on the northern bank of the Yangtse protected by a terrific barrage from Japanese warships anchored in a long line for several miles up the river.

The Japanese concentrated over 100 warships, several of them 10,000-ton cruisers, within a few miles of the capital before they opened their terrific barrage, which was kept up incessantly throughout Sunday. Aeroplanes, in addition, assisted in silencing the Chinese defenders while the landing was under way.

After the Japanese infantry forces landed they enveloped the city from the north and east.

The entire operation was in the nature of a surprise to the Chinese defenders, who obviously did not expect an attack of such magnitude.

The Japanese transports and warships, preceded by mine-sweepers, left Wuhu on Saturday night and by 1 a.m. on Sunday had reached Tatung, 60 miles further up the river.

The first troops were landed at Tassuchi, 12 miles north-east of Anking, at dawn on Sunday, and the fortifications at Chengshankou were stormed and occupied before midday. Almost simultaneously, the main body of Japanese forces was landed at Tawangshan and Sinkiaokou, ten and eight miles respectively east of Anking, and the march on Anking commenced from three directions.

The Japanese were greatly assisted by a dense Yangtse fog, which completely enveloped the district and made defence against an invisible enemy almost hopeless.

In the course of Sunday afternoon and evening, the Japanese occupied one after another the various parts of the city, and at 11 p.m. on Sunday night the Anhwei capital was completely in possession of the invaders.

Shanghai's Guerillas Encouraged

Drastic Measures To Combat Resistance Taken By Japan

Shanghai, June 13.

Attention is being paid by the Chinese authorities to the activities of mobile units in the suburbs of Shanghai and Pootung, according to a Japanese report. The report states that recently a conference was held at Pootung between guerrilla leaders and representatives from Hankow. It is reported that money has been remitted here from Hongkong through local foreign banks for the guerrillas.

Dr. F. C. Yen, with General Tsai Cheng-cheng, came here to make arrangements to finance the activities of the mobile units, the report declares. Gen. Tsai is reported to be discussing with the leaders of the mobile units' future activities.

A Chinese civic organisation at Pootung is organising a police force of 600 men, according to a Chinese report.

The system of lien pao has been adopted by the regime in the area to prevent anyone from joining the guerrillas. The conduct of every person has to be guaranteed by 10 families. When one member is found engaged in anti-Japanese activities, all members of the 10 families will be severely punished. —Reuter.

warships, according to an urgent telephone message received here from Anking this morning.

The Japanese who landed at Chienchankou were driven back to their ships after a vigorous engagement, but those who landed at Wuchabai were still ashore, though they had been forced to retreat down the Yangtse, the Chinese claim.

Severe fighting is progressing on the northern bank of the Yangtse at Chinganchou.

The Chinese spokesman here added that severe fighting was also progressing at Kweichih, on the south bank of the Yangtse, where the Japanese landed from transports, under cover of a severe naval bombardment, and the warfare here was apparently assuming serious proportions. —Reuter.

ADMIRAL LITTLE IN HIGH POST

Former C.-In-C. Of China Fleet

London, June 13.

A Shanghai-born Admiral of the Royal Navy, and former Commander-in-Chief of China Station, has just been appointed Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty and Chief of Naval Personnel, in succession to Admiral Sir M. E. Durrant-Smith. He is Admiral Sir Charles Little.

Until last year Sir Charles was Commander-in-Chief of the China Squadron. Admiral Little was forced to relinquish his Hongkong post through ill-health, and was relieved by the present Commander-in-Chief, Admiral Sir Percy Noble.

The appointment to the Admiralty becomes effective on September 30. —Reuter.

Admiral Little was born in Shanghai in June, 1882, and was the son of the late Dr. L. S. Little, who at one time practiced in Shanghai. Admiral Little's early education was received in the one-time famous Shanghai Institution, George Lane, and later in the training ship Britannia.

Because he is tall and burly the Navy knows him as "Tiny" Little. For over 30 years he was in the submarine service, and during the war commanded first the submarines of the Dover patrol and later those of the Grand Fleet.

Air Attache Sent To Siam By Britain

Wing-Commander Bishop Served In Hongkong

Bangkok, June 13.

Wing Commander A. G. Bishop, formerly R.A.F. Liaison officer in Hongkong, has been appointed Air Attache to the British Embassy in Siam.

Great Britain is thus the first Power to possess accredited military, naval and air attaches in Siam. —Reuter.

Wing Commander Bishop left Hongkong two months ago after being stationed here since 1935.

He is a graduate of the Staff College. He began his service in August, 1912, as second lieutenant in the Royal Marine Light Infantry; was attached to R.N. air units in East Africa and Iraq; and became a pilot in 1916.

A permanent commission as flight lieutenant was granted him in August, 1919, and he was promoted to squadron leader in 1928, while in India, where he served with No. 1 Group at Peshawar from 1924 to 1930.

PLANE SHOT DOWN

Kiangshen, Shansi, June 14.

While reconnoitering over Chinese positions, a Japanese plane was shot down by Chinese anti-aircraft guns near Howma, in south Shansi yesterday. It crashed behind the Japanese lines about one mile to the north of Howma.

Few changes have been noted in the war situation in south Shansi. Following the recapture of several strategic points around Wensi, southwest of Sinkiang, the Chinese are still pressing the Japanese in the city.

Meanwhile, on the Linfen-Lingshih sector, the Chinese troops, assisted by guerrillas, are steadily pushing towards the Tatung-Puchow Railway in an attempt to cut the line.

Apparently aiming at relieving the beleaguered Japanese in central and south Shansi, Japanese reinforcements have been pouring into Taiiku and Yutze. They are repairing the railway track south of Lingshih. Observers believe that a southward drive will be launched by them shortly. —Central News.

INDIA CONDEMNS BOMBINGS

Many Resolutions To Boycott Japan

India's reaction to the Japanese bombing of Canton is revealed in a cable received in Hongkong by Mr. Amrital D. Sheth, representative of the vernacular newspaper, Janmabhoomi, which reads:

"Whole country seething with indignation against Japan for Canton bombings."

"Congress ordered last Sunday as China Day which was observed throughout India."

"Public meetings everywhere passed resolutions condemning Japan, sympathising with China, boycotting Japanese goods, and agreeing to send a red cross mission to China."

Planes Active Near Macao

Macao, June 13.
Japanese planes dropped three bombs this morning, the explosions of which were heard in Macao, at a point some miles to the west of this Colony, but so far no information has been received with regard to the locality bombed.

This is the first activity by the Japanese in these parts for many days: the large concentrations of Japanese warships that were observed one time ago, and which melted away, are still absent, though there are a few small ships in the vicinity of San Chao Island. It is believed that the planes that were active this morning came from these vessels.—Our Own Correspondent.

SUPPRESSION OF HAWKERS

Yesterday a Hongkong magistrate expressed the opinion that the police of the Colony were "working overtime to no good purpose" in arresting eighty-six hawkers in Wanchai and West Point during the week-end. The magistrate is a busy man and anyone can understand and appreciate his very human exasperation at having these cases put before him when important matters are occupying his mind. And in spite of the fact that the police appear to think it so, the rounding up of these unfortunate hawkers is not important, relatively speaking, to the welfare of Hongkong. Most of them appear to be inoffensive enough, trying to earn an honest living, which is more than can be said for a considerable proportion of the lower class element of this community. The scores of cases of snatching and other minor crimes which come before the magistrates are proof enough on that point. Besides, it is considerably better to have hawkers, even unlicensed hawkers, peddling their pitiful goods in the streets and making enough money to buy themselves a bowl or two of rice and fish, than to have them begging in their full force. The magistrate, commenting on the question of licensing these people, observed that it appeared to be easier for young men and women to procure permission to sell their little wares than for the old ones. Surely this is manifestly unfair. Without any knowledge of the requirements of the authorities which issue these licences, it is impossible to criticise. But on the evidence of the magistrate himself it appears that something is radically wrong with the system. If old people are to be deprived of the opportunity of making a meagre living as hawkers, they have no recourse, in most instances, except to turn to mendicancy. They are too slow, in all probability, to be successful thieves. One would think that they would be given all the assistance possible by authority to keep them out of mischief. It is a shame to punish them for trying to earn enough to live on in the only way that seems to be open to them.

It is not too much to say that Hongkong possesses one of the finest police forces in the Far East. Anyone who has had an opportunity to see the officers of

When This Bill Becomes LawYOU CAN'T DISINHERIT YOUR FAMILY

By

Eleanor Rathbone, M.P.,

pioneer of the movement to combat the injustice of malicious wills. The Inheritance Bill, which is expected to become law in July, will give power of redress to those unfortunate wives, children—and husbands—who may be "cut off with a shilling."

A SHADOW of an old injustice lying over the homes of innocent English people is within measurable distance of being swept away for ever. This is the scandal of unjust wills, by which loyal and blameless wives or families are left destitute through the whim or cruel spite of those from whom they naturally expected help.

A Private Member's Bill, which has just been passed unopposed at the Third Reading, has opened the gates of justice for numerous possible victims of the future.

If this Bill—the Inheritance (Family Provision) Bill, which was so ably piloted by Mr. Stanley Holmes, is equally successful in the Lords, it will be a further proof that the private member may still be the means of putting on the Statute Book really important reforms.

In the debate on the Third Reading I described myself as the "great-grand-mother" of the Bill, and my mind went back to the first measure dealing with the evil of the disinherited family, which I introduced in 1931.

Tyrannical Spite

THIS was based on the principle of Scottish and Continental Law, also followed in certain States in America, whereby the surviving spouse or child has a statutory right to a fixed proportion of the estate.

That Bill was referred to a Joint Select Committee of both Houses of Parliament, which reported that a reform was desirable, but that it preferred the plan followed in many parts of the Dominions whereby a disinherited wife, husband or child has the right of appeal to the courts.

These, at their discretion, order suitable provision to be made out of the estate.

As it has passed the House of Commons, the present Bill represents a compromise. It does not give everything that some of us would wish.

But it does provide at last what English law, alone among the codes of civilised countries, has lacked for so long.

Husbands, wives, or children disinherited through no fault of their own, by some tyrannical spite or senile whim, are given some protection.

Right of appeal against an alleged "unjust will" is granted, this body in action, from constables to the most senior officers, knows that without being told. In an emergency they are cool, calm and highly efficient. But it does not require any immense courage or ability to round up 86 hawkers. It would seem that Hongkong is so well policed that officers are able to concentrate on these unfortunate offenders against our code. The thought that they have nothing more important to do should really be gratifying. But to be candid, a good many people feel, with the magistrate who first raised the criticism, that the prosecution of hawkers—particularly those who are not permanent nuisances—is rather more than a waste of time. It is almost persecution.

under the Bill, only to the husband or wife of the testator; children under 21; or, if over 21, to unmarried daughters and disabled sons.

Except in the case of estates of less than £2,000 in value, the court can only make provision from the income, and not from the capital of the estate.

In cases where the testator left wife or husband and one or more dependents, the court might order that reasonable provision be made, provided the amount of such annual income did not exceed two-thirds of the total income of the estate.

Where wife or husband only, or dependents only, are left, the amount of annual income which the court might order to be provided should not be more than one-half of the total income of the estate.

Full regard must be given to all relevant circumstances, including the conduct of the disinherited person, and any just reason for the disinheritance, before a decision is given.

Opponents of the Bill have often urged that there are few hard cases under the existing law.

They would change their estimate of the degree of suffering caused by the Englishman's right to cut off his family with the proverbial shilling if they could read through the files of letters which I and other promoters of the Bill have received from every part of the country.

The most frequent cause of the tragedy is the "second woman," to whom the husband transfers his affections when his wife grows old.

Typical of these cases is that of the widow of a medical practitioner in Lancashire of whom I have heard. Married when her husband was only a student, she even entered domestic service to enable him to have money to take his degree.

For many years they were happily married. Then her husband met a younger woman, to whom he left all his money. Now his widow is almost penniless. She just manages to exist on some public relief, and on slender assistance from her father, who has an old-age pension.

I have before me a letter from a woman living at a South Coast town, who says:

My father died in 1907 leaving an annuity of £250, and his four daughters an annuity of £60. The remainder was left to a religious body. We could not upset the will on grounds of insanity, though he suffered from intense religious mania.

Our old home near London was left to my mother for her lifetime. She cannot afford to live in it. At her death it goes to the religious body. At our death this gets the whole estate.

We were good and obedient children and did nothing to deserve this harsh treatment.

MANY of the cases brought to my notice reveal a degree of spite and vindictiveness, which is almost incredible.

A City of London solicitor tells me of a woman client who was left a widow with four children by the sudden death of her husband, a business man working in India.

After living with her husband in India for 17 years she came to England to educate the children.

While she was using her own

"My land, you can't go to dinner that way — your life preserver's showing!"

HAMISH FRASER, tells howHYPNOTISM
helps your doctor

HYPNOTISM is to be used to restore normal balance to a girl with a mental kink whose recurrent turns of irresponsibility led her into the dock of a police court.

What is this hypnotism? Nothing new, because in the middle of last century Mesmer, calling it then "Animal Magnetism," was attracting throngs to public displays of the mysterious power.

What is new is that we know pretty exactly now what it is, what it can be used for, what it can't do. We know it is no weapon for the villain seeking an innocent tool to commit a crime; that stories of its power being used to convey people in trance over physical obstacles such as unbridged chasms are fantasy; that it is not a certain cure for all types of nervous disorder.

Used Daily

WE know the exercise of the power requires no supernatural gifts, but is within the reach of anyone with a ready tongue; that it can benefit thousands of cases of minor trouble such as those of students approaching an examination who want to work but cannot concentrate; that it is a short cut daily employed in psychological clinics to obviate months of painful questioning which lead little farther towards the elucidation of the source of trouble.

Essentially the technique is that of high-pressure salesmanship. There's not much difference in kind whether I set out to convince you that I have a powder which, sprinkled on your lawn, will make mowing unnecessary, or that you are far from being a human mouse, but actually a lion that has only got to step out to secure your proper share of good fortune.

You would like to be able to deal with your lawn so easily; you would like to be a human lion. To achieve the latter is much easier.

The he-man properties are already there, but dormant; kept in check by fears.

These fears may be due to something simple, such as the fact that they laughed at you at school because your face was always spotty, because old-fashioned parents kept you in shorts long after contemporaries were arrayed in the dignity of trousers. They may be due to something farther back of which you are unaware.

Fears

HYPNOTISM puts the patient into a receptive frame of mind so that his fears are revealed. The queries first place, and secondly the doctor or those of a master. Told to explain his motives for doing certain acts he does so with a wealth of detail he would shrink from in a normal state.

Told that his fears of ridicule are absurd he accepts the statement in his trance without question, and acts afterwards on that principle in normal life without being really aware of the artificial nature of the boost given him.

Psycho-analysis thus seeks to uncover the causes of fears, hypnotism to strengthen resistance to them. Either method is suitable in differing cases. Being hypnotised is a delightful process if you aren't afraid of it. I have done it to others, to myself, and had it done to me.

You lie on a comfortable couch in a half-dark room. You must be very comfortably dressed, warm, and quite relaxed. The operator talks at you, and goes on talking; the drone is incessant but comforting. You are very warm, very comfortable, very lazy, sleeper and sleeper, more and more reluctant to quarrel with the nonsense talked to you.

You find your limbs moving effortlessly at the operator's command; that a sharp pinch imparts no pain. You know he is all right. What he says goes. You lose interest, and wake up at last at his orders, rather disappointed it is finished.

Now not everyone can be put under easily like that. Easy subjects are bluff fellows, ready to listen to anyone's tale of misfortune, to laugh at their own mistakes. One might think they would never have need of treatment themselves. Yet, actually they are of a type that tends to run through life in a series of peaks and depressions.

What they need is temporary control until the pendulum swings the other way. Hypnotism can help them back to normal.

Inaccessible, however, are the quiet people who dwell predominantly in an inner life, observing the real world as it were through a pane of glass which shields their sensitive natures from ordinary contacts. Instinctively they shrink from the attempts of the hypnotist to take control, for he is apt to be an ordinary sort of person with no magic to distinguish him from the crowd.

So they listen acquiescently to all he says, while an inner voice all the time says, "What a dull bore!" And they don't respond in the slightest.

Now, you people who are feeling desperate about your nerves, don't be afraid of going to a specialist about it; don't say, "I won't let you put me to sleep; I'm afraid." If you are patient into a receptive frame of mind so that his fears are revealed. The queries first place, and secondly the doctor or those of a master. Told to ex-

K.C.C. AND U.S.R.C. WIN MIXED DOUBLES TENNIS

HONGKONG C.C. UNDER-RATED BY OPPONENTS RECREIO OUTCLASSED BY LAST YEAR'S CHAMPIONS

(By "Veritas")

Tennis of varying degrees was seen in the mixed doubles league match yesterday between K.C.C. (A) and the Hongkong Cricket Club, which the first-named team won at 6-3. The impression was that the winners were inclined to understate their visitors, otherwise they might have won by a more substantial margin.

The lady players in the Cricket club team gave a good account of themselves, especially Miss Dodwell who served strongly (though her timing was not ideal) and who also displayed a propensity for securing quick points. Mrs. Whitman was in good form, but her partner, H. J. Armstrong, was not quite strong enough to stand up to his opposite number. Mrs. Finlay, formerly Miss Joan Massey of Shanghai, hit the ball furiously, and displayed a drive volley which, when it came off, was an unreturnable shot. Nevertheless she was erratic, and the points that she secured with a blazing drive or from the net, hardly compensated for the numerous mistakes which also came from her racket.

Among the visiting men players, T. A. Pearce played stylishly and extremely well to win two and a half sets. His only weakness was off the ground when in midcourt, but on the volley and overhead, he was impeccable.

Owen-Hughes strove manfully, but attempted just a little too much, his volleying sorties leaving him with a debit balance of points. Perhaps he was too much upset by the result of the first set which he and his partner lost to Teddy Fincher and Mrs. Williams 4-0, after leading four-love.

E. C. FINCHER EXCELS

Teddy Fincher again excelled himself and was always scoring with his adroit placements, made with such effortless ease. He and his partner should have beaten Pearce and Miss Dodwell, for they led 4-2, but then lost the advantage. It was not Mrs. Williams' happiest day, and apart from a few nicely-made backhand drives, her display was undistinguished.

Ernest Fincher, finding a court which suited, served with telling effect, and in every respect played good, reliable tennis. Mrs. Burnett was chiefly notable for some lovely cross-court backhanders which more often than not scored outright.

Gordon Burnett's excellent form this season has been the feature of K.C.C. league tennis, and yesterday he again struck his best form. One remembered with special delight his clever return of service and brilliant volleying. It is a pity that Mrs. Clarke's partner depends so much on defensive measures. A little more enterprise and this couple could rank among the best in the league.

The tennis generally was worthy of the teams, though there were some astonishing lapses by nearly all the players. The state of the courts may have had something to do with this, while it was noticeable that in the last sets, the light was not too good.

Visiting the Club de Recreio, the United Services R.C., last year's champions, were far too good for their hosts and won by eight sets to one. Recreio's solitary point was scored by J. Goncalves and Miss C.

Botelho over Lieut. Mira and Mrs. Holmes.

RECREIO v U.S.R.C.

Recreio "A" lost to U.S.R.C. 0-1.
A. V. Remedios and Mrs. A. Remedios lost to Goldman and Mrs. Holmes 5-4; lost to Major Holmes and Mrs. Holmes 2-5; lost to Lt. Mira and Mrs. Holmes 4-0.
Goncalves and Miss C. Botelho lost to Goldman and Mrs. Holmes 6-1.
A. V. Goncalves and Mrs. A. Rosa lost to Goldman and Mrs. Holmes 6-0; lost to Major Holmes and Mrs. Holmes 6-0; lost to Lt. Mira and Mrs. Holmes 6-0.

K.C.C. v H.K.C.C.

Kowloon Cricket Club beat H.K.C.C. 6-2.
Mrs. Williams and E. C. Fincher beat Mrs. J. Finlay and H. J. Armstrong 6-0; drew with Mrs. D. Dodwell and T. A. Pearce 6-6.
Mrs. Finlay and G. C. Burnett drew with Mrs. Finlay and Owen-Hughes 6-6; beat Mrs. Whitman and Armstrong 6-3; beat Mrs. Burnett and E. C. Fincher 6-2; beat Mrs. Finlay and Owen-Hughes 6-2; beat Mrs. Whitman and Armstrong 6-3; lost to Mrs. Dodwell and Pearce 3-6.

FURTHER PROGRESS MADE IN PAIRS BOWLS TOURNAMENT

Further progress was made in the second round of the Lawn Bowls Pairs championship yesterday, four matches being decided on the Club de Recreio green and two on the Police R.C. green.

G. N. Mitchell and J. C. Brown had a comparatively easy passage against T. F. Stainton and J. A. Watson, of Taikeo R.C., winning by 32-8. By the end of the sixth end, Mitchell and Brown were leading 11-0, which became 25-3 on the 15th. The losers scored only on five heads.

S. M. White and S. Randle also had a comfortable victory, their victims being S. O. Bux and S. M. Rumbhah, of the Indian R.C. White and Randle started off with a three and two's, but the Indians retaliated with a single and a five, which took them to within a shot of their opponents' score. At the eighth, the scores were 8-8, but thereafter Bux and Rumbhah faded away completely. White and Randle finally won by 36-12.

But for a six on the 15th end, S. Eccleshill and G. H. Sheriff would have been in a very bad way against G. C. Norman and J. G. Meyer. Even as it was, they were beaten by 26-11. Consistency was the keynote of the winners' display. They scored on 11 heads in succession from the fourth to the 14th inclusive, and then dropped a six, but they came back with a three and three singles on the succeeding heads; Eccleshill and Sheriff finished with a single and a couple.

EVEN FIGHT

T. Coleman and T. Fergusson had an even fight with W. Cameron and W. McHardy, of the Police R.C., and won by 24-19. The scores were very even up to the 18th end. At the 19th, Cameron and McHardy were leading 18-14, but a three and a two swung the balance of the game; round for Coleman and Fergusson, who led 19-18 after the 18th. They followed it up with a four, which almost clinched the game. Coleman scored a single on the two remaining heads, which left Coleman and Fergusson winners by 24-19.

One of the strongest Recreio pairs in the competition, F. V. V. Ribeiro and H. A. Alves defeated R. Edwards and R. Pitches by 28-12 on the Police green. The winners always had everything in hand and won with ease.

TOMMY FARR NOT TO FIGHT IN ENGLAND

By Harold Lewis

London, May 17.—Tommy Farr has decided to return to America in the second week in June. He will not fight in this country during his present visit.

His American manager, Mr. Joe Gould, told me last night that he and Farr are interested in only one fight in England—a fight with Jack Doyle. They went to see Mr. Arthur Elvin at Wembley last Thursday night, and said Mr. Gould, an offer was then made of £5,000 for a fight with Doyle during the first week in August at Wembley Stadium.

"We are thinking over" said Gould. "We consider that fight would draw between 75,000 and 100,000 people and that the receipts would be at least £25,000."

"Farr and I are going back to see the Louis-Schmeling fight in New York on June 22. We have offers for five fights over there. One is a fight with Maurice Strickland, for which Canada is bidding. Last night came a cable from Mike Jacobs offering us a return fight with Max Baer."

"From Los Angeles is a good offer for a fight with Maxie Rosenbloom, former world's light heavyweight champion; and we also have offers from Philadelphia and Chicago."

I asked Gould what he was proposing to do about the decision of the British Boxing Board of Control that the winner of the Eddie Phillips-Ben Ford fight in London on June 14 would be considered the official challenger to Farr for the British heavyweight championship.

"We are only interested in the Doyle proposition," he repeated. "On Wednesday Tommy goes before the stewards of the Board. He hasn't been told what they want to talk to him about, and I, his manager, have not been invited to go along. As far as your Board is concerned, I don't exist."

WRIGHT PERFORMS "HAT TRICK"

First Of Present Cricket Season

London, May 19.—Bowlers were always on top in a keen day's cricket at Gillingham, where 20 wickets fell for 373 runs. Wright did the hat-trick for Kent, and Goddard bowled superbly for Gloucestershire, who, after being sent in to bat, finished the day 107 runs ahead with all their second innings wickets intact.

The experienced Charles Barnett took the honours at the start of the day and afterwards the younger men, Crapp, Gloucestershire's left-hand batsman, and Wright, Kent's slow bowler, took the honours. Wright, by dismissing Stinfield, Haynes and Crapp with three successive balls in his 23rd over, performed the hat-trick—the first of the season.

Barnett and Crapp between them were responsible for 180 of Gloucestershire's total, and they put on 97 for the fourth wicket by delightful bowling. In attempting to cut a ball that kept low, Barnett was snapped at the wicket. He scored a chanceless 98 out of 154 in two hours 10 minutes.

Crapp took out his bat after giving a splendid display for two hours. He scored readily all round the cricket and sent the ball to the boundary 14 times. Wright took 7 for 77 on a dead pitch and at one time actually sent back four men without conceding a run.

W. R. Hammond, skippering Gloucestershire in the absence of Allen, who is indisposed, placed his faith in Goddard and Stinfield when Kent went in, and the pair never faltered on a pitch that was no faster than in the morning. Egg was the one Kent batsman to face the cleverly-flighted off-spinners with confidence.

Woolley and Ames each hit a six, and with two men out for 62 at tea Kent were not so badly placed. After the interval Goddard got to work and Kent lost their last five wickets for 20.

AUSTRALIANS CAN STILL SAVE TEST AT TRENT BRIDGE

McCabe Foils England With Magnificent Batting

BUT for Stan McCabe's magnificent batting display, where would be the Australians now? Certainly not in their present position, with every possible chance of forcing a draw unless their batting crumbles up a second time. McCabe's 232, made in the face of great odds, prevented England from taking a lead of more than 247 runs at the end of the first innings, and though this was the first time that England has been forced to follow-on, it was nothing like the advantage that the Englishmen looked like establishing at one stage of the game. Australia's prospects of saving the match were far from bright when C. L. Badcock, the last of the acknowledged Australian batsmen in the team, played forward to Wright with the score standing at 104 for five, failed to cover the ball and was bowled. After this, not even the most optimistic Australian supporter could have expected them to reach 411; for apart from Barnett, a left-handed batsman, none of the remaining three—O'Reilly, McCormick and Fleetwood-Smith, could by any stretch of the imagination be labelled a batsman. But each in his own way rose to the occasion; and though none of them, other than Barnett, reached double figures, they played their part in helping McCabe raise the score to a respectable total. When they were put in again, the Australians had lost one wicket (Fingleton's) for 102. They are still 145 runs behind with nine wickets in hand and in the English innings to follow, but in the time left for play—to-day the last day—it is extremely doubtful whether the Englishmen will be able to won 11 and Great Britain four. Britain therefore has a lot of leeway to make up.

Three Titles

FOR many years the leading lady tennis player in France and one of the most consistent players in the world, Madame Simone Mathieu has earned a just reward by winning three titles in the French Tennis Championships just as she, a Frenchwoman, should be so successful in the national championships. Seldom brilliant, she relies on her steadiness to carry her through her matches. Her win in the final of the singles was a comfortable one, her opponent, Miss A. M. Yorkie of Great Britain is one of long standing and their success in the doubles, in view of the limited competition offered by the other contestants, was not entirely a surprise; but her victory with Mille in the mixed doubles was really a praiseworthy effort. Here they did well to beat the strong combination of Miss Nancy Wynne of Australia and Christian Bousquet of France. While it is realised that Madame Mathieu must be in great form to score so many successes, it has also to be remembered that the leading players of the United States and Great Britain were not present in Paris for the championship; they were at Wimbledon and the Wightman Cup. Some of the gift match, therefore, be taken off Madame Mathieu's performance accordingly.

Lovelock Says No

RUMOURS are flying around that Jack Lovelock, Olympic champion and world's record holder at 1,500 metres, is contemplating a return to the track in big athletic events this summer.

These rumours have no foundation. Lovelock, now on duty with a house physician's job at St. Mary's Hospital, is far too busy to think of serious athletics.

Two days a week and every third Sunday he is on duty for twenty-four hours at a stretch. On other days he must always be within call to attend to the needs of the fifty patients in his ward.

Not much room left for training here. True, Lovelock snatches odd hours to run round the track at Paddington just to keep his weight down, but the real business of hard training is out of the question.

If and when Lovelock can spare the time to run he will confine his energies to matches against school teams, a branch of coaching in which he has already done invaluable work.

Abroad, where they don't understand how Lovelock is now concentrating on his medical career, the desire to have him as a guest runner at international meetings is as strong as ever.

The Danish Amateur Athletic Association have invited him to compete at Copenhagen in August (no other English runners were included in the invitation); America wants him for the Princeton meeting in June; Finland would like to see him later in the year.

Lovelock has had to refuse in each case.

Poor Treatment

I AM ashamed of the way the golfers from abroad are treated here during the practice days before the championship, wrote P. B. Lucas from Troon during the British amateur championship. Discontent at the arrangements is universal.

British golfers abroad are, I know from experience, always given special consideration in securing practice times.

But here the American and Australian teams had to take their turn with the rest of us.

The visitors should, of course, have been allotted special starting times. Instead, they have been obliged to wait sometimes an hour and a half before they can start practice.

A famous international golfer said to me: "I have never seen a championship so badly handled."

McCABE HELPS AUSTRALIANS

OUT OF A TIGHT CORNER IN TEST

Flogs Bowling In Double
Century At Notts

London, June 13.
S. J. McCabe, veteran New South Wales all-rounder and Australian vice-captain, provided all the thrills when the first test against England was resumed on the Trent Bridge ground, Nottingham to-day. Batting for most of the day and undeterred by falling wickets, he drove the bowlers off their length, and, stealing the bowling from the indifferent tail, took Australia's score from two for 111, to five for 151 and then to 411 before he was dismissed.

Quicker scoring had seldom been seen before on the ground. McCabe gathered 232 in 235 minutes, and in half an hour's last wicket stand with Fleetwood-Smith, who contributed only five, knocked off 77.

Facing a deficit of 247 on the first innings, Australia was forced to follow on.

The Australians soon showed they were trying to force a draw by steady batting and when stumps were drawn one wicket was down for 102, Fingleton going to a difficult catch by Hammond off Edrich for 40.

To-day's forecast was—Fair, with light northerly winds; average or less temperature. An examination of the wicket before the play opened showed signs that it would probably take a spin, although on Saturday not even Fleetwood-Smith was able to make the ball turn.

The weather was glorious with not a cloud in the sky when McCabe and Ward resumed their innings, but doubts were expressed whether the wicket would last. General opinion was that if it cracked, Australia would have a difficult task against the English spin bowlers.

England's bowlers met with instant success for Farnes was very hostile and Sinfield, Wright, Verity and Hammond all maintained good lengths and were backed up by splendid fielding.

To the overnight score of three for 138, only six had been added before McCabe lost Ward, who fell a victim to a good delivery from Farnes on the second ball of his second over. Ward made only two and four were down for 144.

Hassett almost played on the second ball, but he failed to get set and after scoring one was snapped up by Hammond off Wright at first slip.

Over the Fence
Five were down for 151 when Badcock joined McCabe, and while Badcock took no chances McCabe gave the crowd a display of brilliant driving and pulling. He lifted Farnes over the fence for six on one occasion and after bringing up 50 in 85 minutes, quickly took command of the bowling and reached his century in 135 minutes.

The partnership was beginning to have its possibilities for Australia when Hammond had an inspiration and put Wright on at the pavilion end. The move met with instant success for Badcock was in two minds in attempting a chop stroke, and the ball took his off stump. He had scored only nine and six were down for 194 when Barnett joined McCabe.

He immediately got his eye in and played out time until lunch when the score was six for 201. McCabe was then 105 and Barnett 20.

Farnes had two deliveries with the old ball and then with his first delivery with the new one dismissed Barnett, who sent one to Wright at cover. Barnett had batted solidly for 22 and with McCabe had added 60 in 53 minutes.

O'Reilly, who followed, did not last long, for after making nine he sent one from Farnes to Paynter at mid-on and eight were down for 316. His partnership with McCabe, while it lasted only 25 minutes, added 50 to the score.

Howers Loss Length
Hammond was varying his length too much and Farnes lost his earlier accuracy and direction with the result that McCabe punished him unmercifully, sending him to the pickets three times in one over.

When he had scored 123 McCabe gave a chance to Edrich at square leg, but it was dropped. It was a costly mistake.

McCormick, who followed O'Reilly, was bowled by Wright for two but McCabe took most of the bowling and the pair added 18 for the wicket.

When Fleetwood-Smith joined

McCabe with nine down for 334 Australia's chances looked very dismal, but his arrival began the most amazing partnership of the match for the slow bowler, usually a none too reliable bat, managed to stay in, and with McCabe doing most of the scoring the total gradually rose to the 400 mark.

McCabe was easily the hero of the desperate effort. Hitting cleverly he stole the bowling and attempted to make every stroke a boundary. After bringing up his 150 in 190 minutes he scored two fours, from Wright in succession, repeated the feat in the same over and then in Wright's next over punished him for 14. In three overs McCabe took 34 from Wright.

Quick Scoring

Hammond persevered with Wright however and McCabe enjoyed it for after hitting him three times to the fence off successive balls he brought up his 200 in 215 minutes, having added 105 in 95 minutes after lunch.

Verity, who had bowled without success during the innings, eventually stopped the riot of scoring. Attempting to send a loose one to the fence off the Yorkshire trundler, McCabe cocked one up to Compton at cover, and he made no mistake.

McCabe scored 232 in 235 minutes, after a glorious all-round the wicket display which included a six and 34 fours. It was his highest test score against England, beating his 187 not out at Sydney in 1932-3.

Fleetwood-Smith, however, backed up McCabe well, for in a stone-walling exhibition at a critical period, he added five to the partnership's 77, gathered in half an hour.

Farnes, with four for 100, was the most successful bowler, followed by Wright with four for 153.

Facing a deficit of 247 on the first innings, Fingleton and Brown opened Australia's follow-on innings and soon had 26 on the board. No tea interval was taken.

Taking No Chances

The start of the second innings was an anti-climax to the close of the first for Brown and Fingleton were funeral like and ultra-cautious in their batting, and it became obvious that the Australians had adopted the policy of playing for a draw.

The 50 took 72 minutes to compile and Hammond, Sinfield and Wright, who took up the bowling, all struck good lengths and commanded respect. The crowd barracked the slow batting and clapped impatiently while Fingleton removed a glove and squatted in the field, refusing to continue until the crowd became quiet. After that the spectators confined themselves to remarks during overs.

Fingleton was the first to go, being dismissed by a difficult catch by Hammond at first slip off Edrich. Fingleton, who scored 40, was very stolid and had batted for 137 minutes.

One was down for 39 when Bradman joined Brown, who had been very painstaking and took 153 minutes to reach 50.

When stumps were drawn with one
